

90-1

Manual on Recurring Problems in Criminal Trials

FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER

READEX FICHE

best copy available

JU 13.10/3:

Reproduced from poor document.

THE FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER

Board

The Chief Justice of the United States
Chairman

Judge J. Clifford Wallace
United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

Judge David D. Dowd, Jr.
*United States District Court
Northern District of Ohio*

Judge Monroe G. McKay
United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit

Judge Diana E. Murphy
*United States District Court
District of Minnesota*

Chief Judge William C. O'Kelley
*United States District Court
Northern District of Georgia*

Judge Robert E. Ginsberg
*United States Bankruptcy Court
Northern District of Illinois*

L. Ralph Mecham
Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts

Director

Judge William W. Schwarzer

Deputy Director

Charles W. Nihan

Division Directors

William B. Eldridge
Research

Richard D. Fennell
Innovations & Systems Development

Daniel L. Skoler
Continuing Education & Training

Sylvan A. Sobel
Publications

Russell R. Wheeler
Special Educational Services

1520 H Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20005
Telephone (202) 633-6365

Manual on Recurring Problems in Criminal Trials

By Honorable Donald S. Voorhees
United States District Judge
Western District of Washington
Seattle, Washington

Edited by Deirdre Golash and Bruce Clarke
Federal Judicial Center

Third Edition, 1990

Revised to include cases decided during the Supreme Court's 1989 October term through January 1990 and U.S. Circuit Court cases reported through 875 F.2d.

This work has been developed in conjunction with educational programs sponsored by the Federal Judicial Center. To the degree the manual reflects conclusions and points of view, they are those of the persons who compiled the manual. The Center's educational programs are designed to allow the presentation of a variety of viewpoints. On matters of policy, the Center speaks only through its Board.

FJC-M-90-1

Preface

The late Judge Donald Voorhees made many significant contributions to the federal judiciary during his service as United States District Judge for the Western District of Washington. Among them are this book, a Manual on Recurring Problems in Criminal Trials, which he developed with a view toward assisting his fellow judges in their research on important issues that arise frequently in criminal trials.

As Director of the Federal Judicial Center, I express my appreciation for Judge Voorhees's service. From 1979 to 1983, Judge Voorhees served on the Board of the Center. During this period he wrote this manual and initiated the publication of Bench Comment and Chambers to Chambers. Judge Voorhees later prepared a second edition of this manual, and was working on the current edition when he died. His work in developing all of these publications has provided, and will continue to provide, substantial support and assistance to his colleagues on the bench.

We at the Center are grateful for the opportunity to continue Judge Voorhees's work with the publication of the third edition of his manual. We hope you will find it helpful in your work.

John C. Godbold
Director, Federal Judicial Center
February 1990

Editors' Note

Judge Donald Voorhees was working on this third edition of his Manual on Recurring Problems in Criminal Trials at the time of his death in July 1989. He sent some materials to the Center in March 1988, including the "Caveat" that follows, and worked with members of the staff on further revisions and updating. Although this new edition of the manual is in large measure Judge Voorhees's work, it reflects a variety of changes in format and organization, not all of which could be discussed with Judge Voorhees. Topics were added and expanded upon, for example, and the manual was reorganized so that related topics are grouped together. In updating the case summaries, however, an effort was made to adhere to the style of the original manual wherever possible. As the note on the title page indicates, the manual is current as of 875 F.2d and includes cases through January of the Supreme Court's 1989 October term.

This manual is provided for the information of federal judges only and therefore should not be cited in opinions or other materials. In addition, as Judge Voorhees suggested in his "Caveat," the case summaries provided herein are a research tool to guide users to the cases. They are not a substitute for the judicial opinions they reference.

Caveat

These materials were originally prepared for distribution at the seminars for newly appointed district judges at the Federal Judicial Center. They do not purport to be an exhaustive briefing of the subjects that they touch. Rather, they are a collection of decisions on many of the procedural problems that plague trial judges. It goes without saying that a rule laid down in one circuit is not necessarily the rule in all, or any, of the other circuits. The headnotes of the cited cases should, however, lead through the West System to the decided cases upon the same topic from the other circuits. I am hopeful that this outline may be of assistance in suggesting appropriate responses to the recurring problems that confront trial judges.

I wish to give much credit to my secretary, Mary Anne Anderson, who has so ably assisted me in preparing and assembling all of the materials which make up this manual.

Donald S. Voorhees
March 1988

Contents

Part I. Representation of Defendant

A. Pro Se Representation	1
1. Duty of court to determine that waiver of counsel is made knowingly and voluntarily	1
2. Right of defendant to appear pro se after commencement of trial	2
3. Appointment of standby counsel.....	3
4. Non-lawyer as assisting counsel	4
5. Hybrid representation	4
6. Role of court unchanged when accused appears pro se	4
7. Control over pro se defendant	5
8. When one of several defendants acts pro se.....	5
9. Constructive waiver	5
B. Counsel Substitution	6

Part II. Jury

A. Jury-Related Problems.....	9
1. Appointment of foreperson by court.....	9
2. Replacement of juror with alternate.....	9
3. Substitution of alternate after deliberations have begun	10
4. Communications between trial court and jury	11
5. Misconduct of juror.....	13
6. Outside contact with juror	14
7. Jurors seeing defendant in handcuffs.....	15
8. Temporary disability of deliberating juror	16
9. Questions from jury	16
10. Rereading testimony	17
11. Exhibits to jury room	19

12. Separation of jury	20
13. Anonymous jury	21
14. Deadlocked jury	21
15. Form of verdict	21
16. Challenges for cause	23
17. Peremptory challenges	24
18. Sending copy of indictment to jury	24
19. Interviewing of jurors after verdict	25
20. Simultaneous use of two juries.....	26
21. Testimony by jurors that may impeach verdict	26
22. Note taking by jurors	27
B. Waiver of Right to 12-Person Jury	27
1. Waiver of right to jury trial	28
2. Waiver of right to have 12 persons on jury	28
3. Defendant may not waive right to unanimous jury.....	29
C. Batson v. Kentucky—Potential Striking by Court of Peremptory Challenge by Prosecution	29
1. Criteria for prima facie case.....	30
a. Cognizable group.....	31
b. Defendant's race.....	31
c. Circumstances raising inference of discrimination.....	32
2. Procedure after prima facie case of discrimination has been made	33
3. Permissible reasons.....	34

Part III. Disclosure Issues

A. Jencks Act Material	35
1. Production of government witness's statements.....	35
2. Statement must relate to subject matter of government witness's testimony	36
3. Trial court must determine whether statement should be produced under Jencks Act.....	36

4. Defense counsel must be given reasonable time to review Jencks Act materials before cross-examining witness.....	37
5. Definition of "statement "	37
6. Application of Jencks Act to various documents.....	38
7. Attorney's notes.....	39
8. Destruction of interview notes	39
B. Brady Material.....	40
1. Material affecting credibility of government witnesses	40
2. Doubts to be resolved in favor of disclosure.....	41
3. Court under no duty to search files of prosecutor	42
4. Timing of disclosure of Brady material.....	42
5. Brady applicable only to material available to the prosecution	43

Part IV. Enforcement of Orders During Trial

A. Civil Contempt/Criminal Contempt.....	45
1. Differences between civil and criminal contempt	45
2. Identifying nature of contempt proceedings.....	46
3. Types of sanctions.....	46
4. Joint trials of civil and criminal contempts.....	46
5. Double jeopardy	47
B. Civil Contempt.....	47
1. Civil contempt may be commenced when party has failed to comply with court order	47
2. Nature of contempt proceeding	47
3. Nature of remedies available to court after conviction for civil contempt	48
4. Court may impose fine on contemnor to reimburse injured party	49
5. Effect of imprisoning for civil contempt someone already imprisoned	49
6. Procedure if contemnor persuades court that continuance of imprisonment will not persuade him or her to comply	50

C. Criminal Contempt	50
1. Applicable statute is 18 U.S.C. § 401.....	50
2. Applicable rule of procedure is Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42	51
3. Vulnerability of action to warrant prosecution for criminal contempt.....	52
4. Attorney who may prosecute criminal contempt action.....	52
5. Rights of defendant in criminal contempt action	53
6. Right to jury trial in criminal contempt action depends on potential sentence	54
a. Imprisonment	54
b. Fines imposed on individuals	55
c. Fines imposed on organizations	56
d. Probation	56
7. Trial by another judge	57
8. Sentencing of one found guilty of criminal contempt	57
D. Summary Contempt	57
1. Nature of conduct punishable as summary contempt	58
2. Caution to be observed in exercising summary contempt power	59
3. Finding attorney in summary contempt	60
4. Summary contempt procedure.....	60
a. Warning should be given.....	60
b. Judge must prepare, sign, and file order of contempt.....	61
c. Manner in which punishment is imposed	62
E. Recalcitrant Witness	63
1. Court must order witness to respond	64
2. Witness must be warned	64
3. Recalcitrant witness should first be cited in civil contempt.....	64
4. Witness cited for civil contempt should be advised of possibility of purging the contempt.....	65

5. Witness cited for civil contempt may be subject to punishment for criminal contempt, and should be so advised	65
6. Procedure if witness is confined for civil contempt but fails to purge the contempt	66
7. Procedure upon refusal by witness to respond to question before grand jury	66
8. Procedure if witness claims inability to remember or gives evasive or equivocal answers	67
9. Civil contempt followed by criminal contempt is not double jeopardy	68
10. Punishment for civil contempt	68
11. Punishment for criminal contempt	68
12. Right to trial in criminal contempt proceeding	69
13. Appointment of counsel	69
14. Witness serving sentence is not entitled to credit for time served on contempt citation	69
F. Disruptive Defendant	70
1. Options available to court	70
2. Defendant should be warned	70
3. Ejecting defendant	70
4. Shackling and gagging of defendant	71

Part V. Evidence

A. Admissibility	73
1. Coconspirator statements	73
a. Court's concern must be with statements offered to prove truth of matter asserted	73
b. Findings required	74
c. Court alone determines admissibility of coconspirator's statement; jury plays no role in determination	80
d. Requisites for admissibility of an alleged coconspirator statement need be proved only by a preponderance of the evidence	80

e.	Court controls order of proof	80
f.	Court must make findings relative to requisites of admissibility.....	81
g.	In-court testimony of coconspirator is receivable	82
h.	Effect of dismissal of conspiracy charge against declarant	82
i.	Right of confrontation with regard to coconspirator statements.....	82
j.	Coconspirator statements received in civil actions.....	83
k.	Spousal privilege with regard to coconspirator statements.....	83
l.	Application to joint ventures.....	83
m.	Pretrial disclosure to defendants of coconspirator statements.....	83
n.	In-court presence of coconspirator declarant not needed ..	83
2.	Identification testimony.....	83
a.	Court must determine admissibility of identification testimony.....	84
b.	Lineup.....	85
c.	Identification in court without prior lineup is disfavored.....	85
d.	Single-photograph identification or single-person show-up is suspect.....	86
e.	Witness may testify in court to out-of-court identification of accused.....	87
f.	Equivocal identifications.....	87
g.	Mug shots are inadmissible	88
h.	Defendant entitled to cautionary jury instruction relative to identification testimony.....	88
i.	Admissibility of expert testimony relative to identification of accused	88
j.	Identification of defendant by law enforcement officers.....	89
k.	Defendant must be identified at trial as being perpetrator of the crime	89
3.	Tape recordings of conversations	90

a.	Tape recordings may be admitted into evidence	90
b.	Pretrial procedure with regard to tape recordings.....	91
c.	Court may permit jurors to have transcripts as they listen to tape recordings	91
d.	Courtroom procedure with regard to tape recordings.....	92
e.	Jurors may rehear tape recordings after they have begun deliberations.....	92
f.	Transcripts of tape recordings to jury room	92
4.	Balancing probative value of evidence against prejudicial effect	93
a.	Balancing under Rule 403	93
b.	Balancing under Rule 609(a).....	95
c.	Balancing under Rule 609(b)	99
5.	Receipt of expert testimony	100
a.	Receipt of expert testimony within discretion of trial court.....	100
b.	Criteria to be applied by trial court.....	101
c.	Procedure with regard to expert testimony	101
d.	Opinion testimony on ultimate issue	102
6.	Requiring defendant to display body or to don clothing	103
7.	Evidence improperly admitted or admitted for limited purpose	104
a.	Prior inconsistent statement	104
b.	Evidence admissible for one purpose but not for another	105
c.	When evidence has been withdrawn from jury's consideration	105
8.	"Other crimes" evidence	105
9.	Right of confrontation.....	106
a.	Findings court must make if defendant objects to admission of out-of-court statement	107
b.	Finding of nonavailability of out-of-court declarant	107
c.	Proof of adequacy of indicia of reliability	107
d.	Admissibility of out-of-court statements within exceptions to hearsay rule	108

e.	Coconspirator statements not challenged by right of confrontation.....	109
f.	Defendant's right of confrontation includes right to be present at all stages of trial	110
g.	Placement of screen between defendant and adverse witness violates Confrontation Clause.....	110
h.	Effect of defendant's voluntary absence from trial	110
i.	Defendant has right to be present during jury selection	111
j.	Effect of illness of defendant	111
10.	Confessions by defendant	112
a.	If issue of voluntariness is raised, hearing must be held.....	112
b.	Standard to be applied by court.....	113
c.	Burden on prosecution to prove voluntariness of confession	114
d.	Court is not to consider truthfulness of confession	114
e.	Court to make affirmative finding of voluntariness.....	115
f.	Court to instruct jury	115
11.	Chain of custody.....	115
12.	Conducting experiments before or involving jury.....	116
B.	Witnesses	117
1.	Fifth Amendment	117
a.	Who may claim privilege	117
b.	Privilege may not be invoked after incriminating facts have been voluntarily revealed.....	121
c.	Waiver of privilege by testifying defendant	121
d.	Prosecution witness may invoke privilege on cross-examination	122
e.	Procedure to be followed when a witness claims privilege.....	123
f.	Court should be alert to any indication that witness wishes to invoke privilege	125
g.	Witness not to be called if it is known he or she will claim privilege	126
h.	Effect of grant of immunity	126

i. Defendant may or may not be able to claim privilege after pleading guilty	126
j. Comment in argument after assertion of privilege	127
2. Introducing information adverse to government witness during direct examination	128
3. Cross-examination of government witness	129
4. Interviewing of government witnesses by defense counsel	130
a. Both sides may interview	130
b. Witness may refuse to be interviewed by defense counsel	131
c. Government may not discourage interviewing of witnesses by defendant	132
d. Government may request a temporary restraining order to prevent harassment of witnesses	133
5. Exclusion of witnesses from courtroom	133
6. Defense counsel conferring with testifying defendant during recess	134
C. Other Issues	135
1. Stipulation of facts	135
2. Role of judge in trial	136
3. Comment on evidence by court	137
4. Permitting reopening after resting	138
5. Bench conferences	139

Part VI. Argument

A. Opening Statement	141
1. By the prosecutor	141
2. By defense counsel	141
B. Final Argument	142
1. Right to final argument	142
2. Control by court	142
3. Time limitations	142
4. Prosecutor's comment on defendant's failure to testify	142

a. Direct reference to defendant's failure to testify	142
b. Indirect reference to defendant's failure to testify	143
5. Prosecutor's comment on defendant's failure to present exculpatory evidence	144
6. Improper arguments by government	144
7. Arguments must be from the record	146
8. Duty of court to intervene in improper argument	147
9. Comment on failure of codefendant to testify	147
C. Vouching for Witness	147

Part VII. Multiple Defendants

A. Severance of Defendants	151
1. Individuals indicted together are ordinarily to be tried together	151
2. When joinder not permitted	152
3. Better chance of acquittal does not warrant severance	152
4. Motion for severance by defendant claiming need for testimony of codefendant	152
5. Motion for severance based on antagonistic defenses	153
6. Defendant's desire to testify on one count but not on another	154
7. Factors to be considered by court in assessing motion for severance	154
8. Defendant's motion for severance waived if not renewed at close of evidence	155
B. Bruton Rule	155
1. Determining whether Bruton rule is applicable	156
2. Avoidance of Bruton problem	157
C. Calling of Codefendant as Witness	158
D. Disclosure to Jury of Codefendant's Guilty Plea	158

1. May be reversible error to disclose guilty plea of codefendant to jury	158
2. Occasions when disclosure of codefendant's guilty plea is proper.....	159

Part VIII. Verdict

A. Special Interrogatories in Criminal Cases	161
B. Directing Verdict by Court	162
C. Motion for Judgment of Acquittal	163
1. Criteria to be applied by court in ruling on motion for judgment of acquittal	163
2. Reservation of ruling on motion for judgment of acquittal	163
D. Mistrial	163
1. Court has the power to declare mistrial.....	164
2. Mistrial to be avoided if possible	164
3. Alternative courses of action must be considered	165
4. Declaring mistrial because of deadlocked jury.....	165
5. Improvident declaration of mistrial	166

Part I. Representation of Defendant

A. Pro Se Representation

A defendant in a criminal prosecution has the right to counsel. If the defendant cannot afford to employ counsel, counsel must be appointed by the court. The defendant has the absolute right, however, to waive the right to counsel and proceed pro se.

Faretta v. California, 422 U.S. 806 (1975)

1. Duty of court to determine that waiver of counsel is made knowingly and voluntarily

In order to proceed pro se, the defendant must knowingly and intelligently waive his or her right to counsel.

422 U.S. 806 (1975)

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

875 F.2d 1441 (9th Cir. 1989)

The court must interrogate the defendant to be sure that he or she understands the disadvantages of self-representation; the nature of the charge; the range of penalties; that the defendant will be proceeding alone in a complex area where experience and professional training are greatly to be desired; that an attorney might be aware of possible defenses to the charge; and that the judge believes it would be in the best interests of the defendant to be represented by an attorney.

332 U.S. 708 (1948)

674 F.2d 185 (3d Cir. 1982)

422 U.S. 806 (1975)

860 F.2d 706 (7th Cir. 1988)

683 F.2d 322 (9th Cir. 1982)

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

The court should not delegate this inquiry to the prosecutor.

860 F.2d 706 (1988)

It is not necessary that the court issue any particular warning or make specific findings of fact before it finds that a defendant has made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to counsel and permits the defendant to proceed pro se. However, such on-the-record findings are recommended.

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

A defendant's assertion of the right to self-representation must be unequivocal. A defendant who vacillates between assertion of the right to proceed pro se and assertion of the right to counsel may be presumed to be requesting the assistance of counsel.

875 F.2d 1441 (9th Cir. 1989)

A defendant who invokes the right to proceed pro se only as an alternative to the appointment of a particular defense attorney as his or her counsel is considered to have made an unequivocal request to proceed pro se, and must be allowed to do so.

875 F.2d 1441 (9th Cir. 1989)

See Bench Comment, 1982, No. 4 (FJC): "Instructing defendant prior to an effective waiver of right to counsel."

The court should warn an incarcerated defendant who wishes to proceed pro se that he or she will have limited access to legal materials.

844 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1988)

A determination that an accused lacks expertise or professional capabilities does not justify denying the accused the right of self-representation.

414 F.2d 1040 (9th Cir. 1969)

539 F.2d 45 (10th Cir. 1976)

486 F.2d 182 (9th Cir. 1973)

The court must determine that the defendant is mentally competent to make the decision to appear pro se. The standard for competence for waiving counsel and appearing pro se is higher than the standard for competence to stand trial.

473 F.2d 1113 (D.C. Cir. 1972)

526 F.2d 131 (2d Cir. 1975)

2. Right of defendant to appear pro se after commencement of trial

Once a trial has begun, the right of the defendant to discharge his or her counsel and to appear pro se is sharply curtailed.

534 F.2d 1007 (2d Cir. 1976)

553 F.2d 886 (5th Cir. 1977)

A motion to proceed pro se is timely if made prior to the impanelling of a jury unless the motion is shown to be a delaying tactic.

553 F.2d 886 (5th Cir. 1977)

682 F.2d 782 (9th Cir. 1982)

3. Appointment of standby counsel

The appointment of standby counsel to represent the defendant does not violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to proceed pro se even if the appointment is made over the defendant's objection.

465 U.S. 168 (1984)

Standby counsel cannot be allowed to take over the defendant's case. The Sixth Amendment requires that a pro se defendant be allowed to control the organization and content of his or her defense. The defendant is to use the advice of standby counsel as he or she sees fit.

465 U.S. 168 (1984)

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

There is, however, no absolute bar on standby counsel's unsolicited participation in the presentation of a pro se defendant's case before the jury. Standby counsel may properly assist the pro se defendant before the jury in completing tasks the defendant clearly wishes to complete, such as introducing evidence and objecting to testimony. Standby counsel may also help ensure the defendant's compliance with the basic rules of courtroom protocol and procedure. However, standby counsel's participation may not be so intrusive as to destroy the jury's perception that the defendant is representing himself or herself.

465 U.S. 168 (1984)

Standby counsel is also permitted to participate in the presentation of a pro se defendant's case outside the presence of a jury. However, the pro se defendant must be allowed to address the judge freely on his or her own behalf, and disputes between counsel and the pro se defendant must be resolved in the defendant's favor in matters that are normally left to the discretion of counsel.

465 U.S. 168 (1984)

Standby counsel should be appointed to assist the defendant and to replace the defendant if the court should determine during trial that the defendant can no longer be permitted to proceed pro se.

400 U.S. 455 (1971)

860 F.2d 706 (7th Cir. 1988)

486 F.2d 182 (9th Cir. 1973)

Standby counsel's job is to assist the defendant in procedural matters the defendant is unfamiliar with and to facilitate a speedy and efficient trial by avoiding the delay often associated with pro se representation.

465 U.S. 168 (1984)

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

780 F.2d 1207 (5th Cir. 1986)

The defendant does not have an absolute right to standby counsel of his or her choice.

874 F.2d 838 (1st Cir. 1989)

4. Non-lawyer as assisting counsel

A pro se defendant does not have the right to have a non-lawyer act as his or her assisting counsel.

539 F.2d 1199 (9th Cir. 1976)

5. Hybrid representation

A defendant may appear pro se or by counsel but has no right to appear partly by himself or herself and partly by counsel.

508 F.2d 82 (5th Cir. 1975)

556 F.2d 630 (2d Cir. 1977)

526 F.2d 1019 (10th Cir. 1975)

6. Role of court unchanged when accused appears pro se

When the accused proceeds pro se, the court's role is not altered and no new obligations are imposed on the trial judge.

512 F.2d 10 (9th Cir. 1975)

A litigant who proceeds pro se does so with no greater rights than a litigant represented by a lawyer, and the trial court is under no obligation to become an advocate for or to assist and guide a pro se defendant.

548 F.2d 305 (10th Cir. 1977)
660 F.2d 592 (5th Cir. 1981)

746 F.2d 458 (9th Cir. 1984)

7. Control over pro se defendant

If a pro se defendant persists in refusing to obey the court's directions or in injecting extraneous and irrelevant matter into the record, the court may direct standby counsel to take over the representation of the defendant.

473 F.2d 1113 (D.C. Cir. 1972)
486 F.2d 182 (9th Cir. 1973)

577 F.2d 258 (5th Cir. 1978)

8. When one of several defendants acts pro se

When one codefendant elects to proceed pro se, the court must take steps prior to trial to ensure that his or her actions do not prejudice the remaining codefendants.

563 F.2d 552 (2d Cir. 1977)

9. Constructive waiver

When a defendant repeatedly fails to secure counsel of his or her choice through dilatory conduct, the court may deny an additional continuance for the purpose of securing counsel even if it results in the defendant's being unrepresented at trial.

827 F.2d 1319 (9th Cir. 1987)
838 F.2d 105 (4th Cir. 1988)

Proof of dilatory tactics must appear in the record.

830 F.2d 1500 (9th Cir. 1987)

Before proceeding with a criminal prosecution against an unrepresented defendant who has not expressly waived counsel, the court must inquire on the record into the defendant's financial ability to retain counsel and must inform the defendant of his or her right to court-appointed counsel.

830 F.2d 1500 (9th Cir. 1987)

A defendant's persistent and unreasonable demand for dismissal of successive appointed counsel may be treated as the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of counsel.

871 F.2d 635 (7th Cir. 1989)

B. Counsel Substitution

A trial court has discretion to refuse to allow last-minute substitution of counsel if permitting substitution would disrupt the court's trial schedule.

559 F.2d 567 (9th Cir. 1977)
733 F.2d 1208 (7th Cir. 1984)

870 F.2d 312 (5th Cir. 1989)

For substitution of counsel to be warranted during trial, a defendant must show good cause, such as conflict of interest, complete breakdown of communications, or irreconcilable conflict that could lead to an apparently unjust verdict.

649 F.2d 927 (2d Cir. 1981)
761 F.2d 275 (6th Cir. 1985)

Consideration of a mid-trial motion to substitute counsel requires a balancing of the accused's right to a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel of his or her choice with the public's interest in the prompt and efficient administration of justice.

761 F.2d 275 (6th Cir. 1985)

When a defendant makes a request to substitute counsel or to appear pro se on the eve of trial, the court must inquire into the reasons for the defendant's dissatisfaction with his or her attorney before ruling on the request.

767 F.2d 738 (11th Cir. 1985)
821 F.2d 934 (3d Cir. 1987)

858 F.2d 1462 (10th Cir. 1988)

A defendant does not have the absolute right to counsel of his or her own choosing. The primary aim of the Sixth Amendment is to guarantee an effective advocate for each criminal defendant, rather than to ensure that each defendant will be represented by the lawyer he or she prefers. Substitution of counsel is thus a matter committed to the discretion of the trial court.

Wheat v. United States, 486 U.S. 153, 108 S. Ct. 1692, 100 L. Ed. 2d 140 (1988)
715 F.2d 415 (8th Cir. 1983)
741 F.2d 753 (5th Cir. 1984)
767 F.2d 440 (8th Cir. 1985)
867 F.2d 122 (2d Cir. 1989)

To determine that a defendant voluntarily chose self-representation, the court must find that he or she does not have good cause warranting a substitution of counsel.

858 F.2d 1462 (10th Cir. 1988)

If counsel takes a position antagonistic to the defendant at the hearing on substitution of counsel, the court must appoint independent counsel to represent the defendant at that hearing.

830 F.2d 1500 (9th Cir. 1987)

If the court determines that substitution of counsel is not warranted, the court may insist that the defendant choose between continuing representation by his or her existing counsel and appearing pro se.

674 F.2d 185 (3d Cir. 1982)

838 F.2d 105 (4th Cir. 1988)

819 F.2d 952 (10th Cir. 1987)

854 F.2d 1110 (8th Cir. 1988)

Part II. Jury

A. Jury-Related Problems

1. Appointment of foreperson by court

Although it is not reversible error for the court to designate the foreperson of the jury, it is not a recommended practice.

Juries are understandably sensitive to any perceived cue from the bench, and the judge's selection of a foreperson arguably clothes that foreperson with unwarranted authority.

737 F.2d 439 (5th Cir. 1984)

2. Replacement of juror with alternate

The decision to replace a juror with an alternate juror is committed to the discretion of the trial court.

534 F.2d 1344 (9th Cir. 1976)

615 F.2d 1093 (5th Cir. 1980)

A sitting juror may be replaced with an alternate for reasonable cause.

564 F.2d 620 (2d Cir. 1977)

The trial court may replace a juror whenever it is convinced that a juror's ability to perform his or her duty is impaired.

550 F.2d 277 (5th Cir. 1977) (juror napping throughout trial)

A juror may be replaced because of illness, illness of a member of the juror's family, or family difficulties aggravated by jury service.

571 F.2d 980 (6th Cir. 1978)

A juror may be replaced if he or she is intoxicated.

534 F.2d 1344 (9th Cir. 1976)

The better procedure is for the trial court to notify counsel of the court's intention and to solicit comment before actually making the substitution. Although the court has the right to make a juror substitution for good cause without the consent of counsel, it would be well to seek and secure such consent, if possible, before actually making the substitution.

3. Substitution of alternate after deliberations have begun

Rule 24(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides that "[a]n alternate juror who does not replace a regular juror shall be discharged after the jury retires to consider its verdict."

The Ninth Circuit has held that it is error to substitute an alternate for a regular juror who becomes disabled after the jury has commenced its deliberations.

529 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1975)

The Second and Fifth Circuits have held that there are circumstances in which an alternate may be substituted for a regular juror after the jury has commenced its deliberations.

664 F.2d 971 (5th Cir. 1981)

701 F.2d 1052 (2d Cir. 1983)

Some courts have held that, with the express, knowing, and intelligent consent of the defendant, a disabled deliberating juror may be replaced by an alternate. The jurors must be instructed to commence their deliberations anew.

489 F.2d 274 (10th Cir. 1973)

608 F.2d 699 (6th Cir. 1979)

635 F.2d 1124 (4th Cir. 1980)

692 F.2d 505 (8th Cir. 1982)

711 F.2d 871 (9th Cir. 1983)

Rule 23(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides for an alternative to substituting an alternate juror for a disabled deliberating juror or declaring a mistrial: "[I]f the court finds it necessary to excuse a juror for just cause after the jury has retired to consider its verdict, in the discretion of the court a valid verdict may be returned by the remaining 11 jurors."

Rule 23(b) is the preferred method of proceeding in circumstances in which a juror must be excused after deliberations have begun.

779 F.2d 820 (2d Cir. 1985)
788 F.2d 938 (3d Cir. 1986)

861 F.2d 339 (2d Cir. 1988)

The D.C. Circuit has held that, if the record evidence discloses any possibility that a juror's request to be excused after deliberations have begun stems from the juror's view that the government's evidence is insufficient, the court must deny the request. Moreover, the court may not dismiss the juror under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 23(b) and proceed with 11 jurors. The court may not inquire closely into the juror's motivations in such a case because such inquiry may compromise the secrecy of the deliberations.

823 F.2d 591 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

A juror may not be removed from a deliberating jury in order to avoid a hung jury.

862 F.2d 17 (2d Cir. 1988)

An alternate should not be permitted to sit with the deliberating jurors even for a short period of time. This is true even though the alternate is admonished not to participate in the deliberations unless a regular juror becomes ill or disqualified.

464 F.2d 468 (10th Cir. 1972)

584 F.2d 1358 (4th Cir. 1978)

669 F.2d 1374 (11th Cir. 1982)

But see 650 F.2d 122 (7th Cir. 1981)

790 F.2d 208 (2d Cir. 1986) (disapproved, but did not reverse, stipulated use of 13-person jury. Stated that the procedure should not be repeated.)

4. Communications between trial court and jury

It is error for the trial court to communicate with the jury out of the presence of the defendant.

273 U.S. 583 (1927)

570 F.2d 258 (8th Cir. 1978)

422 U.S. 35 (1975)

So also is it error for a law clerk to interview jurors about an alleged incident.

587 F.2d 813 (6th Cir. 1978)

The court should immediately notify counsel of any communication it receives from any juror.

560 F.2d 507 (2d Cir. 1977)

871 F.2d 957 (11th Cir. 1989)

562 F.2d 1345 (2d Cir. 1977)

A communication from the jury should be answered in open court, in the presence of counsel and the defendant, after counsel has been informed of its substance and given an opportunity to respond.

422 U.S. 35 (1975)

It is reversible error for the court to inquire of the jurors as to their numerical division at any time prior to verdict. This is true even if the court does not ask how the jury is divided.

272 U.S. 448 (1926)

600 F.2d 435 (3d Cir. 1979)

594 F.2d 1303 (9th Cir. 1979)

An unsolicited disclosure of the jury's numerical division is not, however, a ground for mistrial.

522 F.2d 1310 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

594 F.2d 1046 (5th Cir. 1979)

It is error for the trial court to confer with the foreperson of a jury outside of the presence of counsel and the defendant. In United States v. U.S. Gypsum Co., the foreperson requested, and was accorded, a conference with the trial court in order to describe all of the difficulties that he was having with the deliberating jurors and to seek further guidance from the court.

Any ex parte meeting or communication between the judge and the foreperson of a deliberating jury is pregnant with possibilities for error. It is difficult to contain, much less to anticipate, the direction the conversation will take at such a meeting. Unexpected questions or comments can generate unintended and misleading impressions of the judge's subjective personal views. In addition, any occasion which leads to communications with the whole jury panel through one juror inevitably risks innocent misstatements of the law and misinterpretations despite the undisputed good faith of the participants.

438 U.S. 422, 460 (1978)

It is error for the court to set any time limitations on the jury's deliberations or to suggest that the court is going to keep the jury deliberating until a verdict is reached.

509 F.2d 8 (5th Cir. 1975)

5. Misconduct of juror

The scope of an investigation into juror misconduct is within the court's discretion.

867 F.2d 850 (5th Cir. 1989)

When advised of alleged juror misconduct, the court should give notice to all parties and then question the involved juror or jurors on the record about the alleged misconduct.

587 F.2d 813 (6th Cir. 1978)

The court should, if possible, conceal the identity of the party that instigated the inquiry.

513 F.2d 709 (1st Cir. 1975)

When faced with a claim of juror misconduct, the court must conduct an investigation to ascertain whether the alleged misconduct actually occurred. The court must then determine whether the alleged misconduct has so prejudiced the defendant that he or she cannot receive a fair trial.

649 F.2d 78 (1st Cir. 1981)

665 F.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1981)

The hearing may be held in camera, but it must be in the presence of counsel and the defendant.

512 F.2d 766 (8th Cir. 1975)

In conducting the hearing, the trial court must be careful not to magnify the possible wrong.

512 F.2d 766 (8th Cir. 1975)

546 F.2d 135 (5th Cir. 1977)

The purpose of the hearing is to determine if even one juror is unduly biased or prejudiced so as to deny the defendant the right to an impartial panel.

549 F.2d 1225 (9th Cir. 1977)

Counsel may not withhold knowledge of misconduct until after the jury starts deliberating and then have a motion for mistrial sustained.

636 F.2d 200 (8th Cir. 1980)

6. Outside contact with juror

It is reversible error to have a deputy marshal and an FBI agent play a tape for the jury in the jury room after deliberations have begun. Jury proceedings must be free from the danger of improper influence by an interested party.

634 F.2d 1267 (10th Cir. 1980)

Contra 781 F.2d 740 (9th Cir. 1986)

If the trial court becomes aware that someone has made some kind of improper contact with a juror, the court should not decide and take final action ex parte on the information, but should determine the circumstances, the impact thereof on the juror, and whether the contact was prejudicial. These determinations should be made in a hearing, with all interested parties permitted to participate.

582 F.2d 974 (5th Cir. 1978)

582 F.2d 1152 (7th Cir. 1978)

587 F.2d 705 (5th Cir. 1979)

605 F.2d 507 (10th Cir. 1979)

626 F.2d 365 (4th Cir. 1980)

664 F.2d 971 (5th Cir. 1981)

822 F.2d 1191 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

866 F.2d 540 (2d Cir. 1989)

At the hearing, the court should determine whether the juror has discussed the incident with other jurors.

822 F.2d 1191 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

In Remmer v. United States, 347 U.S. 227 (1954), the Supreme Court ruled that any private, off-the-record contact with a juror raises a presumption of prejudice to the defendant. The Remmer Court stated that the government bears the heavy burden of proving that any such contact was harmless to the defendant. However, in Smith v. Phillips, 455 U.S. 209 (1982), after referring to Remmer's presumptive-prejudice standard, the Supreme Court stated that the remedy for "allegations of juror partiality is a hearing in which the defendant has the opportunity to prove actual bias." 455 U.S. 209 at 215.

The Sixth and Ninth Circuits have interpreted Phillips as reinterpreting Remmer. These circuits hold that the defendant now has the burden of showing that prejudice has resulted from unauthorized juror contact.

737 F.2d 521 (6th Cir. 1984)

862 F.2d 92 (6th Cir. 1988)

842 F.2d 1090 (9th Cir. 1988)

The Fourth, Fifth, Eleventh, and District of Columbia Circuits continue to hold that the government has the burden of showing that the defendant was not prejudiced by any improper juror contact.

664 F.2d 971 (5th Cir. 1981)

822 F.2d 1191 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

806 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir. 1986)

852 F.2d 740 (4th Cir. 1988)

If it comes to the attention of the court that a juror has been improperly contacted, the court should notify counsel and confer with them with respect to the procedure to be followed and the possible replacement of that juror with an alternate. The court has the discretion to interrogate or not to interrogate all of the other jurors to ascertain whether any one of them has been tainted by the improper contact.

571 F.2d 980 (6th Cir. 1978)

822 F.2d 1191 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

799 F.2d 665 (11th Cir. 1986)

If a juror engages in conversation with a witness during a recess, the preferable procedure is to substitute an alternate for that juror.

581 F.2d 1294 (8th Cir. 1978)

7. Jurors seeing defendant in handcuffs

If jurors inadvertently see the defendant in handcuffs, the court should give an instruction to the jury that no inferences are to be drawn from the fact that the defendant is in handcuffs.

555 F.2d 15 (1st Cir. 1977)

870 F.2d 557 (9th Cir. 1989)

It must be assumed that jurors would understand and follow a proper instruction that handcuffing of a person in custody for transportation to and from the courtroom is a reasonable precaution that in no way reflects on the presumption of innocence.

533 F.2d 185 (5th Cir. 1976)

8. Temporary disability of deliberating juror

If during deliberations a juror should become temporarily incapacitated, it is permissible to suspend the deliberations for a short time in order to permit the possible recovery of the juror.

536 F.2d 313 (10th Cir. 1976)

The Ninth Circuit has held that it is permissible to recess a trial for 11 days, after the presentation of evidence has concluded but before the commencement of closing arguments, because of the illness of one juror.

649 F.2d 731 (9th Cir. 1981)

9. Questions from jury

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 43(a) guarantees a defendant the right to be present "at every stage of the trial including . . . the return of the verdict." Compliance with this rule requires that the trial court respond to an inquiry from the jury only in open court, after revealing its contents to counsel and giving counsel an opportunity to be heard on the matter.

273 U.S. 583 (1927)

562 F.2d 1345 (2d Cir. 1977)

422 U.S. 35 (1975)

871 F.2d 957 (11th Cir. 1989)

522 F.2d 1310 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

When a jury makes explicit its difficulties with the court's instructions, the court is obligated to clear away those difficulties "with concrete accuracy."

326 U.S. 607 (1946)

592 F.2d 1066 (9th Cir. 1979)

557 F.2d 741 (10th Cir. 1977)

604 F.2d 625 (9th Cir. 1979)

The court should not answer questions from the jury informally in the form of a colloquy between the court and the foreperson but rather should respond in a formal way so that the defendant has adequate opportunity to evaluate the propriety of the proposed response or supplemental instruction and to formulate objections or suggest a different response.

591 F.2d 526 (9th Cir. 1979)

639 F.2d 931 (2d Cir. 1981)

In its response to an inquiry, the trial court must be sure that it is not in effect making a finding of fact, since the jury may not enlist the court as a partner in the fact-finding process.

575 F.2d 209 (9th Cir. 1978)

Only the trial judge should respond to a jury inquiry.

A magistrate may not respond to a jury inquiry.

605 F.2d 154 (5th Cir. 1979)

The court clerk may not respond to a jury inquiry.

644 F.2d 890 (1st Cir. 1981)

If the court gives an additional instruction, it should remind the jury of the prior instructions and advise the jury to consider the instructions as a whole.

609 F.2d 796 (5th Cir. 1980)

It is error to send a dictionary to the jury room at the request of the jurors. Questions about the meaning of terms should be settled by the court after consulting with counsel.

781 F.2d 740 (9th Cir. 1986)

Questioning of witnesses by jurors in open court is disapproved. If questioning by jurors is to be permitted, the questions should be submitted in writing. The court may then pose the questions in their original form if it finds them to be proper, or it may restate them.

783 F.2d 410 (4th Cir. 1986)

10. Rereading testimony

If requested to do so by a deliberating jury, the court may have the court reporter read to the jurors portions of the testimony of a witness. Any such request must be disclosed to counsel and their comments solicited before any testimony is read.

502 F.2d 566 (5th Cir. 1974)
552 F.2d 833 (9th Cir. 1976)

645 F.2d 85 (1st Cir. 1981)
736 F.2d 66 (3d Cir. 1984)

When a jury requests the reading of certain testimony, it is error to deny that request without consulting counsel.

723 F.2d 666 (9th Cir. 1984)
863 F.2d 4 (2d Cir. 1988)

The court should take into consideration the reasonableness of the request and the difficulty of complying with it.

594 F.2d 261 (1st Cir. 1979)

In general, the rereading of testimony is disfavored because of the emphasis it places on specific testimony.

700 F.2d 479 (9th Cir. 1983)
769 F.2d 595 (9th Cir. 1985) (videotaped testimony)

Tapes of recorded conversations may be replayed at the request of a deliberating jury. Any such request must be disclosed to counsel and their comments solicited before any tape is replayed.

443 F.2d 1167 (2d Cir. 1971)
528 F.2d 143 (5th Cir. 1975)
548 F.2d 228 (8th Cir. 1977)
561 F.2d 1252 (7th Cir. 1977) (rev'd on other grounds)
658 F.2d 1225 (7th Cir. 1981)
569 F.2d 1386 (5th Cir. 1978)
749 F.2d 338 (6th Cir. 1984) (provided tapes have been admitted as exhibits)

The defendant, his or her counsel, and the judge must be present when tapes are replayed.

832 F.2d 128 (9th Cir. 1987)

In its discretion the court may permit properly authenticated transcripts of recorded conversations to be taken to the jury room.

443 F.2d 1167 (2d Cir. 1971)
789 F.2d 975 (1st Cir. 1986)
859 F.2d 1144 (2d Cir. 1988) (English translations of conversations recorded in Spanish)

When the trial court makes the discretionary decision to have a portion of a witness's testimony reread to the jury, the court should state on the record, before the rereading, exactly what portion of the testimony is to be reread.

863 F.2d 474 (7th Cir. 1988)

The trial court has discretion to permit the replaying of videotaped testimony. Videotaped testimony is unique, however. It serves as the functional equivalent of a live witness, and for that reason may be given undue emphasis by the jury if replayed. When replaying is allowed, the videotape must be played in its entirety, in open court, and with counsel present.

769 F.2d 595 (9th Cir. 1985)

869 F.2d 499 (9th Cir. 1989)

11. Exhibits to jury room

It is within the discretion of the trial court to allow exhibits that have been admitted into evidence to be sent to the jury room.

696 F.2d 72 (8th Cir. 1982)

815 F.2d 1200 (8th Cir. 1987)

726 F.2d 385 (8th Cir. 1984)

The trial court may in its discretion send all or part of the admitted exhibits to the jury room before or after the jurors have begun their deliberations.

745 F.2d 1305 (10th Cir. 1984)

It is error to send a dictionary to the jury room at the request of the jurors without consulting counsel. Questions or disputes as to the meaning of terms are to be settled by the court rather than by jurors' reference to a dictionary.

723 F.2d 666 (9th Cir. 1984)

Evidence that has been admitted only for illustrative purposes during trial is not to go into the jury room. Illustrative evidence is properly used as a testimonial aid for a witness or as an aid to counsel during final argument. It is not to be referred to by the jurors during deliberations.

633 F.2d 871 (9th Cir. 1980)

Transcripts of tape recordings used to assist the jury when tapes are played during trial may be sent to the jury room for the same purpose, absent any showing that the transcripts are inaccurate or that specific prejudice will result.

872 F.2d 385 (11th Cir. 1989)

12. Separation of jury

It is within the discretion of the trial court to permit deliberating jurors to separate overnight.

574 F.2d 931 (7th Cir. 1978)

679 F.2d 163 (9th Cir. 1982)

602 F.2d 799 (7th Cir. 1979)

It is essential to a fair trial—civil or criminal—that a jury be cautioned as to permissible conduct and conversations outside the jury room. Such an admonition is particularly needed before jurors separate at night, when they will converse with friends and relatives. It is fundamental that the jurors be cautioned from the beginning of a trial and generally throughout to keep their considerations confidential and to avoid wrongful and often subtle suggestions offered by outsiders.

635 F.2d 744 (8th Cir. 1980)

If the court permits jurors to separate overnight, it should interrogate jurors the next day to be sure that each has abided by the court's instructions to refrain from talking to anyone about the case and from reading or hearing anything about the case.

506 F.2d 748 (3d Cir. 1974)

The decision to sequester a jury is within the trial court's discretion.

559 F.2d 31 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (even over defense objection)

864 F.2d 19 (3d Cir. 1988) (sua sponte decision of court)

The trial court may sequester the jury during trial if some event occurs that causes the court to want to avoid the risk that the jury might become exposed to some prejudicial influence if not sequestered.

503 F.2d 208 (7th Cir. 1974)

Sequestration is, however, the most burdensome of tools for ensuring a fair trial. It should be ordered only if no other means is available or effective.

554 F.2d 813 (8th Cir. 1977)

13. Anonymous jury

The court may withhold jurors' names and addresses from counsel if necessary to protect their safety and to guard against jury tampering.

757 F.2d 1359 (2d Cir. 1985)

850 F.2d 1015 (3d Cir. 1988)

14. Deadlocked jury

If the court is advised that the jury has become deadlocked, the court should not declare a mistrial until it has assured itself that the jury is hopelessly deadlocked. It is not sufficient that the jurors are currently deadlocked. The court must determine whether there is a probability that the jury can reach a verdict within a reasonable time or whether it is hopelessly deadlocked. It is best to poll the jurors individually as to whether they are hopelessly deadlocked. The questioning should be in open court. The court must not question the jury as to its vote or as to the split of the vote.

505 F.2d 845 (9th Cir. 1974)

The court should question the foreperson individually and the other jurors either one by one or as a group.

566 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1978)

15. Form of verdict

Polling of the jury should be accomplished by the questioning of individual jurors, not by a show of hands.

772 F.2d 66 (4th Cir. 1985)

If a verdict is not in proper form or is for any reason unclear, the jury must be returned for further deliberations.

521 F.2d 76 (8th Cir. 1975)
870 F.2d 822 (2d Cir. 1989)

The verdict of a jury need not be internally consistent. Consistency of the verdict on separate counts is not required.

554 F.2d 231 (5th Cir. 1977) 610 F.2d 1272 (5th Cir. 1980)
557 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1977) 872 F.2d 1061 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

Even after a verdict is announced in court, jurors remain free to register their dissents until the verdict is accepted by the court.

507 F.2d 166 (5th Cir. 1975)

The verdict may not be accepted by the court if a poll of the jurors indicates a lack of unanimity. The court should direct the jury to retire for further deliberations or should dismiss the jury.

571 F.2d 876 (5th Cir. 1978) 612 F.2d 483 (10th Cir. 1979)
597 F.2d 81 (6th Cir. 1979)

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 31(d) provides as follows: "If upon the poll there is not unanimous concurrence, the jury may be directed to retire for further deliberations or may be discharged."

Although the rule permits the discharge of the jury, it is preferable to direct the jury to retire for further deliberations, as that might obviate the necessity for a retrial.

If, at the polling, the response of a particular juror is equivocal, the verdict may not be received.

562 F.2d 619 (10th Cir. 1977)
608 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1979)

If, through inadvertence, an incorrect verdict form is signed, that error may be corrected at once. Each juror must be polled as to the correct verdict.

614 F.2d 1175 (8th Cir. 1980)

Once a single juror dissents from the verdict, the polling must immediately terminate.

696 F.2d 916 (11th Cir. 1983)

715 F.2d 822 (3d Cir. 1983)

850 F.2d 177 (3d Cir. 1988) (immediate termination preferred option)

The court may not inquire as to the reason for a juror's dissent from the announced verdict.

692 F.2d 83 (9th Cir. 1982)

The court may accept a partial verdict on one or more counts of an indictment.

626 F.2d 77 (9th Cir. 1980)

If accepted, a partial verdict is not subject to revision by the jury.

651 F.2d 140 (2d Cir. 1981)

872 F.2d 1061 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

A jury should be neither encouraged to nor discouraged from returning a partial verdict, but the jurors should be aware of their options.

651 F.2d 140 (2d Cir. 1981)

In a codefendant case, Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 31(b) permits the jury to return "a verdict or verdicts with respect to a defendant or defendants as to whom it has agreed."

16. Challenges for cause

If a prospective juror imparts information on voir dire that indicates an inability to be impartial or to be free from fear, that individual should be excused for cause. If this is not done, a party may have to exercise a peremptory challenge which should not have to be exercised.

526 F.2d 1223 (5th Cir. 1976)

716 F.2d 1499 (9th Cir. 1983)

554 F.2d 200 (5th Cir. 1977)

The excusing of a prospective juror for cause must be based on a trial court's finding of actual or implied bias.

569 F.2d 1274 (3d Cir. 1978)

The better practice is for the trial court to permit counsel to present their challenges for cause in writing or, if oral, outside the hearing of the prospective jurors. The prospective jurors should not be able to overhear the challenges for cause.

17. Peremptory challenges

Counsel may, in the court's discretion, be required to exercise their peremptory challenges simultaneously rather than alternately.

151 U.S. 396 (1894)

632 F.2d 1341 (5th Cir. 1980)

314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963)

670 F.2d 956 (11th Cir. 1982)

When there are multiple defendants, the court may in its discretion award additional challenges to the defendants.

542 F.2d 1283 (7th Cir. 1976)

The award of additional peremptories to the defendants is permissible, not mandatory.

782 F.2d 785 (9th Cir. 1986)

18. Sending copy of indictment to jury

It is within the court's discretion to send a copy of the indictment to the jury, but the court should consider whether doing so may prejudice the defendant.

586 F.2d 1253 (8th Cir. 1978)

589 F.2d 339 (8th Cir. 1978)

If a count has been dismissed or a particular count does not pertain to the defendant on trial, the indictment should be retyped to eliminate the count or counts for which the defendant is not being tried.

529 F.2d 412 (5th Cir. 1976)

If several defendants named in the indictment are not on trial or if parties change during the course of trial, better practice is not to submit a copy of the indictment to the jury.

534 F.2d 1197 (6th Cir. 1976)

19. Interviewing of jurors after verdict

Federal courts do not look with favor on the interviewing of jurors after verdict.

219 F.2d 199 (9th Cir. 1954)
457 F.2d 1098 (9th Cir. 1972)
544 F.2d 237 (5th Cir. 1976)
576 F.2d 432 (2d Cir. 1978)

588 F.2d 746 (9th Cir. 1978)
657 F.2d 676 (5th Cir. 1981)
759 F.2d 961 (1st Cir. 1985)

It is not an abuse of discretion for a trial court to deny a motion by counsel to interview jurors after verdict.

558 F.2d 312 (5th Cir. 1977)
865 F.2d 1173 (10th Cir. 1989)

The court has the power, and sometimes the duty, to order that all post-trial interviews of jurors occur under its supervision.

576 F.2d 432 (2d Cir. 1978)
582 F.2d 654 (2d Cir. 1978)

Post-trial interviews should be permitted only if there are reasonable grounds to believe that a specific, nonspeculative impropriety has occurred that could have prejudiced the defendant.

718 F.2d 1210 (2d Cir. 1983)
866 F.2d 540 (2d Cir. 1989)

The First Circuit has prohibited all post-verdict interviews of jurors by counsel, litigants, or their agents except under the supervision of the district court and then only in such extraordinary situations as are deemed appropriate.

759 F.2d 961 (1st Cir. 1985)

Only under the most unusual circumstances is the court justified in directing jurors not to talk to representatives of the news media after verdict.

581 F.2d 1358 (9th Cir. 1978)

Once the jury has been chosen, news media are entitled to names and addresses of jurors, alternates, and venirepersons, but not to other information on the venire list.

841 F.2d 74 (4th Cir. 1988)

20. Simultaneous use of two juries

When certain testimony is admissible against one codefendant but not against the other, the two codefendants may be tried simultaneously before two different juries. Only the jury trying the codefendant against whom the testimony is admissible will hear that testimony.

676 F.2d 1359 (11th Cir. 1982)

716 F.2d 16 (D.C. Cir. 1983)

681 F.2d 1127 (9th Cir. 1982)

758 F.2d 1151 (7th Cir. 1985)

If multiple juries are used, the trial judge should carefully explain to them their functions and instruct them particularly not to talk about the case to anyone in the other jury.

676 F.2d 1359 (11th Cir. 1982)

21. Testimony by jurors that may impeach verdict

Federal Rule of Evidence 606(b) provides as follows:

[A] juror may not testify as to any matter or statement occurring during the course of the jury's deliberations or to the effect of anything upon that or any other juror's mind or emotions as influencing the juror to assent or dissent from the verdict or indictment or concerning the juror's mental processes in connection therewith . . . nor may a juror's affidavit or evidence of any statement by the juror . . . be received for these purposes.

Juror testimony is admissible only if it relates to extraneous influences on the deliberations.

654 F.2d 538 (9th Cir. 1981)

787 F.2d 257 (7th Cir. 1986)

660 F.2d 919 (3d Cir. 1981)

Extraneous influences include publicity received and discussed in the jury room, consideration of evidence not admitted in court, and contacts between jurors and third parties, including contacts between jurors and the trial judge outside the presence of the defendant and his or her counsel.

684 F.2d 141 (D.C. Cir. 1982)

The trial court should hold a post-trial jury hearing only when there is clear, strong, substantial, and incontrovertible evidence that specific, nonspeculative impropriety has occurred which could have prejudiced the trial of the defendant.

718 F.2d 1210 (2d Cir. 1983)

866 F.2d 540 (2d Cir. 1989)

The hearing should be conducted so as to minimize the intrusion on the jury's deliberations, and fact-finding should be limited to a determination of the precise nature of the information proffered and the degree to which that information was actually discussed or considered.

821 F.2d 887 (2d Cir. 1987)

The practice of getting affidavits from jurors to impeach their verdicts should not be encouraged, as it is inherently intimidating.

725 F.2d 417 (7th Cir. 1984)

22. Note taking by jurors

It is within the court's discretion to provide notebooks and pencils to jurors and to permit note taking.

557 F.2d 697 (10th Cir. 1977)

565 F.2d 533 (8th Cir. 1977)

If note taking is permitted, jurors should be instructed that their notes are only aids to memory and should not be given precedence over their own independent recollection of the facts, and that they must not allow their note taking to distract their attention from the proceedings.

578 F.2d 64 (3d Cir. 1978)

863 F.2d 141 (1st Cir. 1988)

783 F.2d 410 (4th Cir. 1986)

B. Waiver of Right to 12-Person Jury

A defendant may waive his or her right to a trial by jury and may waive the right to have 12 persons on that jury. If the defendant indicates a desire to waive either right, the court must interrogate the defendant on the record to be sure that he or she is voluntarily and knowingly waiving the right to be tried by a jury of 12 persons.

1. Waiver of right to jury trial

The defendant may waive his or her right to a jury trial. Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 23(a) provides that the waiver must be in writing and approved by the court with the consent of the government.

A written waiver alone is not sufficient, however. The court must interrogate the defendant on the record to make sure that the waiver is voluntarily and knowingly made. The court should question the defendant to make sure that the defendant knows (1) the difference between a jury trial and a non-jury trial, (2) that he or she is entitled to participate in the selection of the jury, (3) that the verdict of the jury must be unanimous, and (4) that if he or she waives a jury, the court alone will determine the question of guilt or innocence.

The trial judge should accept a waiver of the right to trial by jury only after determining that there was an intelligent and competent waiver by the accused. The duty of the trial court is not to permit the jury to be discharged as a mere matter of rote. The trial court should directly question the defendant to determine the validity of any proffered waiver of jury trial.

511 F.2d 355 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

560 F.2d 1303 (7th Cir. 1977)

583 F.2d 362 (7th Cir. 1978)

704 F.2d 117 (3d Cir. 1983) (colloquy with defendant preferred but not required)

2. Waiver of right to have 12 persons on jury

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 23(b) provides that at any time before verdict the parties may stipulate in writing, with the approval of the court, that the jury shall consist of any number fewer than 12, or that a valid verdict may be returned by a jury of fewer than 12 should the court find it necessary to excuse one or more jurors for just cause after the trial commences.

The stipulation for a jury of fewer than 12 persons must be in writing.

727 F.2d 1003 (11th Cir. 1984)

A written stipulation is not sufficient to effect a defendant's waiver of the right to be tried by a jury of 12 persons, however. The court must in-terrogate the defendant on the record to be sure that the waiver of 12 jurors is knowingly and voluntarily made.

603 F.2d 69 (9th Cir. 1979)

704 F.2d 267 (6th Cir. 1983)

604 F.2d 961 (5th Cir. 1979)

3. Defendant may not waive right to unanimous jury

A defendant in a criminal prosecution may not waive the right to a unanimous verdict.

553 F.2d 453 (5th Cir. 1977)

581 F.2d 1338 (9th Cir. 1978)

578 F.2d 507 (3d Cir. 1978)

711 F.2d 488 (2d Cir. 1983)

See Bench Comment, 1984, No. 1 (FJC): "Defendants may not waive requirement of unanimous verdicts in federal criminal trials."

Contra 782 F.2d 928 (11th Cir. 1986) (If jury has had reasonable time to deliberate and has advised court that it could not reach decision, defendant may waive right to unanimous verdict. Waiver must have been initiated by defendant. Court must carefully explain to defendant defendant's right to a unanimous verdict and the consequences of a waiver of a unanimous verdict.)

C. Batson v. Kentucky—Potential Striking by Court of Peremptory Challenge by Prosecution

Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), authorizes the court to strike the prosecution's peremptory challenge of a potential juror of the same cognizable racial group as the defendant. Batson does not mandate the striking of the challenge; it only authorizes the striking of the challenge.

If the court observes that there is one, or more than one, potential juror of the same cognizable racial group as the defendant, the court should proceed in the following way:

1. The court should advise prosecution and defense counsel that all peremptory challenges are to be exercised in writing and no challenges are to be disclosed unless revealed by the court.
2. When both prosecution and defense counsel have recorded all of their peremptory challenges in writing and submitted them to the court, the court should disclose the challenges of each side to the other.

3. The court should then call a bench conference and at the bench inquire of defense counsel whether he or she has any challenge to the prosecution's peremptory challenges which he or she wishes to express.
4. If defense counsel has no challenge to any one of the peremptory challenges of the prosecution, the court should proceed to eliminate those potential jurors who were challenged by the parties and proceed to fill the jury box.
5. If defense counsel does have one or more challenges to the prosecution's peremptory challenges, the judge should then leave the courtroom with both counsel and the defendant in order to hear the challenges of defense counsel.
6. Out of the presence of the prospective jurors the prosecution must then convince the court that its reason for peremptorily challenging that particular potential juror was for a reason or reasons other than that the potential juror was of the same cognizable racial group as the defendant.
7. If the prosecution persuades the court that it did not act improperly, the court should strike the defense's challenges to the prosecution's peremptory challenges and then proceed with the filling of the jury box.
8. If the prosecution fails to persuade the court that it acted properly, the court should strike that particular peremptory challenge and then proceed to fill the jury box.

1. Criteria for prima facie case

A prima facie case of discrimination in jury selection is established where the defendant is a member of a cognizable racial group, the prosecutor uses peremptory challenges to remove members of that group from the jury, and "these facts and other relevant circumstances raise an inference" that the prosecutor excluded jurors on account of their race.

Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 96 (1986)

The defendant must raise the issue in a timely fashion.

806 F.2d 73 (3d Cir. 1986)

793 F.2d 656 (5th Cir. 1986)

An objection made after the jury had been sworn has been held timely.

827 F.2d 1254 (9th Cir. 1987)

a. Cognizable group

American Indians are a cognizable racial group for Batson purposes.

812 F.2d 1302, 1314 (10th Cir. 1987)

Batson may apply to ethnic, as well as racial, groups.

839 F.2d 825 (1st Cir. 1988)

Black males are not a cognizable group.

804 F.2d 1208 (11th Cir. 1986)

Young adults are not a cognizable group.

825 F.2d 538 (1st Cir. 1987)

Batson should not be extended to peremptory challenges on the basis of gender.

850 F.2d 1038 (4th Cir. 1988)

The Third Circuit has held that in cases involving white defendants, Batson prohibits a prosecutor from using peremptory challenges to strike whites from the jury panel on account of their race.

865 F.2d 59 (3d Cir. 1989)

b. Defendant's race

In Holland v. Illinois, 493 U.S. ___, 110 S. Ct. 803, 107 L. Ed. 2d 905 (1990), the Supreme Court rejected a white defendant's claim that a prosecutor's use of peremptory challenges to strike all black venire members from the jury violated the Sixth Amendment. Nevertheless, although the issue was neither raised by the petitioner nor decided by the Court, five members of the Holland Court wrote concurring and dissenting opinions agreeing that a defendant of a race different from that of the jurors has standing to challenge the racially motivated exclusion of jurors on equal protection grounds under Batson.

c. Circumstances raising inference of discrimination

Mere exclusion of a juror of the defendant's race, without more, does not establish a prima facie case.

831 F.2d 760 (8th Cir. 1987)

816 F.2d 443 (9th Cir. 1987)

The number of black jurors peremptorily struck is not dispositive of the issue whether a prima facie case has been established. If a black juror is struck and the defense raises a Batson challenge, the court must consider whether there are other factors in the case that support an inference of discriminatory purpose in striking the juror.

864 F.2d 1543 (11th Cir. 1989)

Use of a peremptory challenge to strike the last remaining juror of a defendant's race is sufficient to raise an inference of exclusion based on race.

812 F.2d 1302 (10th Cir. 1987)

The presence of minority members on the jury may undercut an inference of impermissible discrimination.

819 F.2d 847 (8th Cir. 1987)

However, a prima facie case may be made even where one or more black persons serve on the jury.

836 F.2d 1084 (8th Cir. 1987)

843 F.2d 741 (3d Cir. 1988)

Courts differ on whether the prosecution's use of a high percentage of its strikes to exclude minority members from a jury establishes a prima facie case.

819 F.2d 847 (8th Cir. 1987) (no prima facie case established)

836 F.2d 1084 (8th Cir. 1987) (prima facie case established by disproportionate number of strikes of black jurors)

The Sixth Circuit has held that even the prosecution's use of all its peremptory challenges against blacks does not necessarily give rise to an inference of intentional discrimination. Whether the inference will be drawn depends on such factors as whether the final jury has a significantly lower percentage of minority members than the jury pool, whether the prosecution used all of its peremptory challenges, and whether the defense displayed a pattern of strikes against non-minority members.

859 F.2d 1501 (6th Cir. 1988)

The Third Circuit has rejected a government proposal for a per se rule that no prima facie case exists unless a certain number or percentage of challenged jurors are black.

843 F.2d 741 (3d Cir. 1988)

The Eighth Circuit has held that a history of systematic exclusion of blacks from juries in a particular district is a relevant factor in determining whether a defendant has made out a Batson claim.

864 F.2d 78 (8th Cir. 1988)

See Bench Comment, 1988, No. 3 (TJC): "Determining a prima facie case under Batson v. Kentucky."

2. Procedure after prima facie case of discrimination has been made

Once the defendant has made out a prima facie case of discrimination, the burden shifts to the prosecution to present a neutral explanation for its challenges.

Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 97 (1986).

The court should hold an adversary hearing to consider the prosecutor's reasons and permit rebuttal by the defendant.

827 F.2d 1254 (9th Cir. 1987)

817 F.2d 1538 (11th Cir. 1987)

819 F.2d 71 (4th Cir. 1987)

816 F.2d 421 (8th Cir. 1987)

832 F.2d 1175 (9th Cir. 1987)

813 F.2d 658 (5th Cir. 1987)

Some circuits do not require such a hearing in all circumstances.

809 F.2d 1194 (6th Cir. 1987)

849 F.2d 103 (4th Cir. 1988)

836 F.2d 334 (7th Cir. 1988)

If disclosure of the prosecution's reasons would reveal strategy, an ex parte hearing or in camera submission may be permissible.

827 F.2d 1254 (9th Cir. 1987)

860 F.2d 125 (4th Cir. 1988)

However, such procedures should be used only if there are compelling reasons.

836 F.2d 334 (7th Cir. 1988)

860 F.2d 125 (4th Cir. 1988)

3. Permissible reasons

To rebut a prima facie case of discrimination, the government must provide reasons that apply to the challenged jurors but not to unchallenged jurors who are not members of the defendant's race.

827 F.2d 1254 (9th Cir. 1987)

853 F.2d 606 (8th Cir. 1988)

Excluding even one minority juror for a racial reason is prohibited by Batson.

803 F.2d 1567 (11th Cir. 1986)

817 F.2d 1538 (11th Cir. 1987)

836 F.2d 1084 (8th Cir. 1987)

Mere denial of discriminatory motive or affirmation of good faith is insufficient.

Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 97-98 (1986)

853 F.2d 606 (8th Cir. 1988)

864 F.2d 1543 (11th Cir. 1989)

While reasons tangentially related to race may be acceptable, the assumption that black jurors would be sympathetic to black defense counsel is not an acceptable reason for excluding black jurors.

817 F.2d 674 (10th Cir. 1987)

The assumption that black jurors, but not white jurors, would be pressured by friends of the defendant to be sympathetic to the defendant is also not an acceptable reason for excluding black jurors.

853 F.2d 606 (8th Cir. 1988)

See Bench Comment, 1988, No. 4 (FJC): "Procedure under Batson v. Kentucky when prima facie case of discrimination demonstrated."

Part III. Disclosure Issues

A. Jencks Act Material

The Jencks Act is codified at 18 U.S.C. § 3500.

1. Production of government witness's statements

The Jencks Act provides that statements of a government witness are discoverable by a defendant after that witness has testified on direct examination at trial.

The court may not compel the government to produce Jencks Act material until after a witness has testified. Some U.S. attorneys will, however, voluntarily produce those materials prior to trial or, at the latest, on the first day of trial.

592 F.2d 852 (5th Cir. 1979)

750 F.2d 726 (8th Cir. 1984)

667 F.2d 569 (6th Cir. 1982)

Only statements in the possession of the prosecutorial arm of the federal government must be produced.

556 F.2d 1265 (5th Cir. 1977)

772 F.2d 366 (7th Cir. 1985)

697 F.2d 915 (11th Cir. 1983)

Statements need not be in the possession of the U.S. attorney's office to be producible under the Jencks Act. Possession by any federal investigative agency satisfies the requirement that the statement be in the possession of the prosecutorial arm of the federal government.

448 F.2d 1182 (D.C. Cir. 1971)

769 F.2d 453 (8th Cir. 1985)

606 F.2d 1150 n.24 (D.C. Cir. 1979)

Presentence reports are not considered to be in the possession of the prosecutorial arm of the federal government for Jencks Act purposes.

556 F.2d 1265 (5th Cir. 1977)

743 F.2d 1026 (4th Cir. 1984)

2. Statement must relate to subject matter of government witness's testimony

After a government witness has testified on direct examination, the government must produce on request any statement of that witness in its possession that relates to the subject matter of the witness's testimony. The prosecution must produce only those statements that relate generally to the events and activities testified to by the witness.

523 F.2d 1122 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

571 F.2d 376 (7th Cir. 1978)

The defendant is not entitled to a statement that does not relate to the subject matter of the witness's testimony even though the statement does relate to the subject matter of the indictment, information, or investigation.

384 F.2d 554 (3d Cir. 1967)

If the government contends that a portion of the statement does not relate to the testimony the witness gave on direct examination, the court shall review the statement in camera and excise any portions of it that do not relate to the direct testimony of the witness.

788 F.2d 517 (8th Cir. 1986)

861 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir. 1988)

3. Trial court must determine whether statement should be produced under Jencks Act

The court may not simply rely on a prosecutor's statement that undisclosed material is not Jencks Act material. The court shall order the government to deliver the material to court for inspection.

521 F.2d 1318 (9th Cir. 1975)

771 F.2d 1219 (9th Cir. 1985)

715 F.2d 1364 (9th Cir. 1983)

798 F.2d 985 (7th Cir. 1986)

761 F.2d 735 (D.C. Cir. 1985)

In determining whether a statement must be produced under the Jencks Act, the trial court may review the statement at issue in camera. The court may also conduct a hearing and interrogate witnesses or government representatives who might have knowledge of the statement.

360 U.S. 343 (1959)
365 U.S. 85 (1961)
519 F.2d 233 (5th Cir. 1975)

565 F.2d 212 (2d Cir. 1977)
788 F.2d 517 (8th Cir. 1988)

If the government deletes any portion of a statement it produces, the trial court must, on motion of the defendant, examine the deleted portion in camera and make a determination as to whether the deletion was proper.

589 F.2d 1258 (5th Cir. 1979)
629 F.2d 908 (4th Cir. 1980)

715 F.2d 1364 (9th Cir. 1983)

It is error for a trial judge who examines a lengthy document containing potential Jencks Act statements in camera to refuse to review the document in its entirety.

797 F.2d 1461 (9th Cir. 1986) (diary)
861 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir. 1988) (diary)

4. Defense counsel must be given reasonable time to review Jencks Act materials before cross-examining witness

It is an abuse of discretion for the court not to grant defense counsel's request for adjournment in order to have adequate time to examine Jencks Act materials.

722 F.2d 37 (4th Cir. 1983)

5. Definition of "statement"

The Jencks Act defines a "statement" as

1. a written statement made by said witness and signed or otherwise adopted or approved by him;
2. a stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recording, or a transcription thereof, which is a substantially verbatim recital of an oral statement made by said witness and recorded contemporaneously with the making of such oral statement; or
3. a statement, however taken or recorded, or a transcription thereof, if any, made by said witness to a grand jury.

6. Application of Jencks Act to various documents

Notes taken by a government agent in interviewing a witness are producible after the witness testifies if it appears that the notes were adopted or approved by the witness or that they were a substantially verbatim recital of oral statements made by the witness.

365 U.S. 85 (1961)

504 F.2d 1355 (8th Cir. 1974)

425 U.S. 94 (1976)

521 F.2d 1318 (9th Cir. 1975)

Notes of interviews do not fall within the Jencks Act if they contain only occasional verbatim recitations of phrases used by the person interviewed. Such notes do fall within the Jencks Act if they contain extensive verbatim recitations.

360 U.S. 343 (1959)

617 F.2d 831 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

556 F.2d 366 (5th Cir. 1977)

648 F.2d 367 (5th Cir. 1981)

597 F.2d 903 (5th Cir. 1979)

Production of reports that are not substantially verbatim recitals of oral statements would threaten witnesses with impeachment on the basis of statements that they did not actually make.

360 U.S. 343 (1959)

863 F.2d 1522 (1989)

581 F.2d 553 (5th Cir. 1978)

A report made by a government agent, if pertaining to the subject matter of the testimony of the government agent, is producible after the agent has testified.

365 U.S. 312 (1961)

810 F.2d 485 (5th Cir. 1987)

586 F.2d 1041 (5th Cir. 1978)

The only parts of the report that are producible are those relevant to the agent's testimony at trial.

523 F.2d 1122 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

Grand jury testimony relating to the in-court testimony of a witness must be produced.

594 F.2d 753 (9th Cir. 1979)

7. Attorney's notes

Interview notes made by a government attorney in interviewing a government witness are producible only if those notes have been signed or otherwise adopted or approved by the witness.

425 U.S. 94 (1976)

581 F.2d 193 (9th Cir. 1978)

582 F.2d 483 (9th Cir. 1978)

Discussions of the general substance of what the witness has said do not constitute adoption or approval of the lawyer's notes.

581 F.2d 193 (9th Cir. 1978)

Interview notes made by government counsel and consisting of one-word references and short phrases are not Jencks Act statements because they are not substantially verbatim recitals.

575 F.2d 117 (7th Cir. 1978)

If there is a question as to whether a report, statement, or notes are producible, the trial court must hold a hearing and receive extrinsic evidence to determine whether the interviewer read back the statement to the witness or permitted the witness to read the statement. A general inquiry by the interviewer as to whether he or she has correctly understood what the witness has said, followed by the witness's affirmative response, does not constitute adoption or approval of the notes.

425 U.S. 94 (1976)

567 F.2d 1289 (5th Cir. 1978)

590 F.2d 10 (1st Cir. 1978)

8. Destruction of interview notes

There is a split among the circuits as to whether rough interview notes should be preserved.

The Third, Ninth, and D.C. Circuits have held that these notes must be preserved.

524 F.2d 421 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

543 F.2d 1247 (9th Cir. 1976)

562 F.2d 275 (3d Cir. 1977)

However, the Ninth Circuit has also held that not every type of rough note need be preserved.

623 F.2d 551 (9th Cir. 1979)

665 F.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1981)

618 F.2d 605 (9th Cir. 1980)

Several circuits have held that interview notes need not be preserved.

554 F.2d 770 (6th Cir. 1977)

580 F.2d 1382 (10th Cir. 1978)

556 F.2d 671 (2d Cir. 1977)

604 F.2d 1102 (8th Cir. 1979)

557 F.2d 1086 (5th Cir. 1977)

697 F.2d 170 (7th Cir. 1982)

565 F.2d 362 (5th Cir. 1978)

719 F.2d 711 (4th Cir. 1983)

The circuits are split, too, as to whether the destruction of interview notes calls for any type of sanction.

572 F.2d 1383 (9th Cir. 1978) (declaration of mistrial by trial court approved)

580 F.2d 63 (3d Cir. 1978) (destruction was harmless error in this case)

607 F.2d 1257 (9th Cir. 1979) (testimony of witness suppressed)

608 F.2d 889 (1st Cir. 1979) (sanctions may be imposed)

617 F.2d 831 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (sanctions left to discretion of trial court)

659 F.2d 932 (9th Cir. 1981) (sanctions not justified where destruction of rough interview notes was in good faith and those notes can be determined by secondary evidence not to be Jencks Act statements)

665 F.2d 877 (9th Cir. 1981) (sanctions not warranted for destruction of handwritten draft of report of meeting)

759 F.2d 1451 (9th Cir. 1985) (sanctions are within the discretion of the trial court)

B. Brady Material

In Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), the Supreme Court ruled that the suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused, upon request for disclosure by the accused, violates due process where the evidence is material to the guilt or punishment of the accused, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution.

1. Material affecting credibility of government witnesses

If the reliability of a witness may be determinative of the guilt or innocence of the accused, Brady requires the disclosure of any evidence bearing on the credibility of that witness.

671 F.2d 248 (7th Cir. 1982)

729 F.2d 256 (3d Cir. 1984)

The government's obligation to disclose Brady material is contingent on three factors: (1) a request for exculpatory material by the defendant, (2) the evidence being favorable to the defendant, and (3) the materiality of the evidence.

778 F.2d 556 (10th Cir. 1985)

Materiality is the touchstone in the determination of whether certain evidence qualifies as Brady material.

760 F.2d 1492 (9th Cir. 1985)

875 F.2d 13 (1st Cir. 1989)

878 F.2d 1031 (7th Cir. 1989)

881 F.2d 1313 (5th Cir. 1989)

Impeachment evidence that would tend to undermine the credibility of an important government witness falls within the Brady rule.

405 U.S. 150 (1972)

473 U.S. 667 (1985)

877 F.2d 210 (2d Cir. 1989)

878 F.2d 1031 (7th Cir. 1989)

881 F.2d 1313 (5th Cir. 1989)

The duty to disclose Brady material is ongoing; information that may be deemed immaterial upon original examination may become material as the proceedings progress.

480 U.S. 39 (1987)

2. Doubts to be resolved in favor of disclosure

When the government is in doubt as to the exculpatory nature of material, the prosecutor either should disclose the material to the accused or should submit it to the court for the court's determination whether the material should be disclosed to the accused.

611 F.2d 770 (9th Cir. 1980)

685 F.2d 1105 (9th Cir. 1982)

729 F.2d 256 (3d Cir. 1984)

If, following a Brady request, the government has serious doubts as to the usefulness of a particular piece of evidence to the defense, the government should resolve all doubts in favor of full disclosure.

529 F.2d 1125 (9th Cir. 1976)

727 F.2d 1453 (9th Cir. 1984)

3. Court under no duty to search files of prosecutor

Speculation that the government may possess Brady material does not require the court to direct production of government files for an in camera search by the court.

796 F.2d 1112 (9th Cir. 1986)

The trial court has no obligation to conduct a general Brady search of a prosecutor's files when the prosecutor has assured the court that all possibly exculpatory material has been produced.

722 F.2d 37 (4th Cir. 1983)

However, when the prosecutor submits material to the court for a Brady determination, the court has an obligation to examine the material in camera and determine whether disclosure to the defense is required.

828 F.2d 330 (6th Cir. 1987)

Under certain circumstances the court should undertake an in camera investigation rather than accept the government's assurance that there are no Brady materials, or that contested materials are not exculpatory under Brady.

480 U.S. 39 (1987)

632 F.2d 1330 (5th Cir. 1980)

608 F.2d 607 (5th Cir. 1979)

877 F.2d 210 (2d Cir. 1989)

If the court declines to order the disclosure of certain material, that material should be sealed and made a part of the record on appeal.

608 F.2d 607 (5th Cir. 1979)

Defense counsel is not entitled to review the government's files in search of materials that arguably fall within the scope of Brady.

480 U.S. 39 (1987)

4. Timing of disclosure of Brady material

The district court may order when Brady material is to be disclosed.

729 F.2d 256 (3d Cir. 1984)

Some decisions have held that the Jencks Act controls and that Brady material relating to a certain witness need not be disclosed until that witness has testified on direct examination at trial.

524 F.2d 465 (5th Cir. 1975)

612 F.2d 453 (9th Cir. 1979)

Other decisions have held that Brady material must be disclosed prior to trial, in order to afford the defendant the opportunity to make effective use of it during trial.

534 F.2d 964 (D.C. Cir. 1976)

554 F.2d 577 (3d Cir. 1977)

592 F.2d 852 (5th Cir. 1979)

870 F.2d 1222 (7th Cir. 1989)

Brady information that will require defense investigation or more extensive defense preparation for trial should be disclosed at an early stage of the case.

729 F.2d 256 (3d Cir. 1984)

5. Brady applicable only to material available to the prosecution

Brady material is limited to information known to the prosecutor and unknown to the defense.

427 U.S. 97 (1976)

868 F.2d 524 (2d Cir. 1989)

779 F.2d 1287 (7th Cir. 1985)

869 F.2d 975 (6th Cir. 1989)

The prosecutor need not search the files of the state police.

674 F.2d 469 (5th Cir. 1982)

The prosecutor need not seek out such material.

559 F.2d 365 (5th Cir. 1977)

657 F.2d 1377 (8th Cir. 1981)

A prosecutor with knowledge of and access to Brady material that exists outside the borders of his or her district must disclose that material to the defense.

868 F.2d 1032 (9th Cir. 1989)

A presentence report on a government witness is not Brady material, since presentence reports are not available to the prosecution.

546 F.2d 1378 (10th Cir. 1976)

The failure of law enforcement officers to preserve evidence that potentially exculpates the defendant does not violate Brady or the Due Process Clause absent a showing that the officers acted in bad faith.

Arizona v. Youngblood, 109 S. Ct. 333, 102 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1988) (semen specimens lost prior to testing through negligence)

Part IV. Enforcement of Orders During Trial

A. Civil Contempt/Criminal Contempt

Civil contempt is remedial in scope to enforce compliance with a court order. The purpose of criminal contempt is punishment. If the purpose of the contempt is to coerce compliance with a court order, the penalty is civil. If the purpose is to punish an individual for past disobedience of a court order, the penalty is criminal.

543 F.2d 894 (D.C. Cir. 1976)

621 F.2d 1255 (3d Cir. 1980)

555 F.2d 146 (7th Cir. 1977)

The Supreme Court has elucidated the distinction as follows:

If the relief provided is a sentence of imprisonment, it is remedial if "the defendant stands committed unless and until he performs the affirmative act required by the court's order," and is punitive if "the sentence is limited to imprisonment for a definite period." If the relief provided is a fine, it is remedial when it is paid to the complainant, and punitive when it is paid to the court, though a fine that would be payable to the court is also remedial when the defendant can avoid paying the fine simply by performing the affirmative act required by the court's order.

Hicks on Behalf of Feiock v. Feiock, 485 U.S. 624 (1988).

1. Differences between civil and criminal contempt

In civil contempt the defendant can purge himself or herself of contempt by compliance with the court's order and thereby avoid further sanctions. This is not possible with respect to criminal contempt.

544 F.2d 1175 (3d Cir. 1976)

866 F.2d 571 (2d Cir. 1989)

Imprisonment in civil contempt is for an indefinite period and may be ended at any time by the party's compliance. In criminal contempt the imprisonment is punitive, not coercive, and hence is for a fixed period of time.

571 F.2d 111 (2d Cir. 1978)
621 F.2d 1255 (3d Cir. 1980)

866 F.2d 571 (2d Cir. 1989)

Criminal contempt is a crime in the ordinary sense. It is a violation of the law, a public wrong. A conviction for criminal contempt frequently results in serious penalties and carries the same stigmas as does an ordinary criminal conviction. The criminal contempt power is best exercised with restraint. A judge should resort to criminal contempt only after he or she determines that holding the contemnor in civil contempt would be inappropriate or fruitless.

600 F.2d 1027 (2d Cir. 1979)

2. Identifying nature of contempt proceedings

It is essential that the court determine and make known at the earliest practicable time whether the contempt is to be civil or criminal in order that the proceedings may comply with appropriate rules of procedure.

See Bench Comment, 1981, No. 2 (FJC): "Need for trial court to identify contempt proceeding as being civil contempt or criminal contempt."

548 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1977)
625 F.2d 1177 (5th Cir. 1980)
629 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1980)

3. Types of sanctions

There are three types of contempt sanctions: punitive, compulsory, and compensatory. The first is a criminal contempt sanction. The other two are civil.

614 F.2d 655 (9th Cir. 1980)

4. Joint trials of civil and criminal contempts

Although it is not reversible error to do so, trying civil and criminal contempt charges jointly is not a recommended practice.

714 F.2d 996 (9th Cir. 1983)

5. Double jeopardy

Civil contempt followed by criminal contempt for the same act does not subject the contemnor to double jeopardy. It is possible for the court to bring an action in criminal contempt after bringing, and acting upon, an action in civil contempt.

330 U.S. 258 (1947)

384 U.S. 364 (1966)

355 U.S. 66 (1957)

671 F.2d 68 (2d Cir. 1982)

B. Civil Contempt

1. Civil contempt may be commenced when party has failed to comply with court order

Civil contempt proceedings are intended to coerce compliance with a court order, compensate complainant for losses sustained by reason of noncompliance, or both.

545 F.2d 1336 (3d Cir. 1976)

678 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1982)

639 F.2d 29 (1st Cir. 1980)

Sanctions for civil contempt may be imposed without a finding of willfulness. Since the purpose of civil contempt is remedial, it does not matter what the defendant's intention was in doing the contumacious act.

336 U.S. 187 (1949)

869 F.2d 34 (2d Cir. 1989)

868 F.2d 665 (4th Cir. 1989)

In a civil action a civil contempt proceeding is instituted by the motion of the plaintiff.

545 F.2d 1336 (3d Cir. 1976)

681 F.2d 1302 (11th Cir. 1982)

In a criminal action a civil contempt proceeding is instituted by the prosecutor.

2. Nature of contempt proceeding

A person charged with civil contempt is entitled to be represented by counsel, to be given adequate notice, and to have an opportunity to be heard. Due process also requires that the court appoint counsel to represent a person charged with civil contempt if that person is indigent and faces the prospect of imprisonment.

468 F.2d 1368 (9th Cir. 1972)
518 F.2d 955 (2d Cir. 1975)
553 F.2d 1154 (8th Cir. 1977)

629 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1980)
671 F.2d 690 (2d Cir. 1982)

A civil contempt proceeding, which may lead to a penalty, is a trial rather than a hearing on a motion. The issue may hence not be heard on affidavits.

536 F.2d 1268 (9th Cir. 1976)

There is no right to a jury trial in civil contempt.

543 F.2d 894 (D.C. Cir. 1976)
567 F.2d 955 (10th Cir. 1977)

600 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1979)
706 F.2d 1266 (2d Cir. 1983)

Proof of the contempt must be clear and convincing. This standard is higher than preponderance of the evidence but lower than beyond a reasonable doubt.

592 F.2d 921 (6th Cir. 1979)
653 F.2d 419 (9th Cir. 1981)
703 F.2d 653 (2d Cir. 1983)

711 F.2d 1096 (1st Cir. 1983)
736 F.2d 854 (2d Cir. 1984)
869 F.2d 461 (9th Cir. 1989)

3. Nature of remedies available to court after conviction for civil contempt

The district court has wide discretion in fashioning a remedy for civil contempt. The sanctions must, however, be remedial and compensatory, not punitive.

639 F.2d 29 (1st Cir. 1980)
642 F.2d 28 (2d Cir. 1981)
673 F.2d 53 (2d Cir. 1982)

689 F.2d 1150 (3d Cir. 1982)
736 F.2d 854 (2d Cir. 1984)

To compel compliance with a court order, the court may order imprisonment for an indefinite period of time or impose a repetitive fine.

Although conditional fines may be imposed to compel compliance with a court order, those fines may not be punitive in nature.

563 F.2d 8 (2d Cir. 1977)
642 F.2d 28 (2d Cir. 1981)

4. Court may impose fine on contemnor to reimburse injured party

The court may order a contemnor to reimburse an injured party for losses actually sustained from noncompliance and for expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred in attempting to enforce compliance.

529 F.2d 822 (5th Cir. 1976)

655 F.2d 779 (7th Cir. 1981)

592 F.2d 126 (2d Cir. 1979)

676 F.2d 969 (3d Cir. 1982)

639 F.2d 29 (1st Cir. 1980)

760 F.2d 343 (1st Cir. 1985)

If a fine is imposed on a contemnor in order to reimburse an injured party, that fine must be based on evidence of the complainant's actual losses.

727 F.2d 82 (3d Cir. 1984)

The court may in its discretion award attorney's fees reasonably and necessarily incurred by the injured party in an attempt to force compliance with a court order.

759 F.2d 702 (9th Cir. 1985)

781 F.2d 680 (9th Cir. 1986) (court has discretion to analyze each contempt case individually and to decide whether an award of fees and expenses is appropriate)

793 F.2d 1529 (11th Cir. 1986)

5. Effect of imprisoning for civil contempt someone already imprisoned

Unless the court orders otherwise, a sentence for civil contempt interrupts a sentence already being served by a contemnor so that his or her release date for the original sentence is postponed by the length of his or her imprisonment for civil contempt.

569 F.2d 775 (3d Cir. 1978)

572 F.2d 1373 (9th Cir. 1978)

If a defendant is ordered to give handwriting samples but refuses to do so, he or she may be committed for civil contempt, and the court may postpone his or her trial date.

584 F.2d 960 (10th Cir. 1978)

6. Procedure if contemnor persuades court that continuance of imprisonment will not persuade him or her to comply Confinement for contempt may continue so long as the court is satisfied that the confinement might produce the intended result. If after a conscientious consideration of the circumstances the court is convinced that the confinement has ceased to have the desired coercive effect and is not going to have that effect in the future, the confinement should be terminated. Criminal contempt is then available and can fully vindicate the court's authority.

715 F.2d 34 (2d Cir. 1983)
759 F.2d 589 (7th Cir. 1985)

760 F.2d 736 (7th Cir. 1985)

The determination whether a civil contempt has lost its coercive effect is within the discretion of the trial court.

A contemnor need be released only upon a determination that there no longer remains a realistic possibility that continued confinement might cause the contemnor to testify. The burden of proof is on the contemnor to demonstrate that no such realistic possibility exists.

782 F.2d 325 (2d Cir. 1986)

C. Criminal Contempt

1. Applicable statute is 18 U.S.C. § 401

Section 401, Title 18 of the United States Code provides as follows:

A court of the United States may punish by fine or imprisonment, at its discretion, such contempt of its authority, and none other, as—

- (1) Misbehavior of any person in its presence or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice;
- (2) Misbehavior of any of its officers in their official transactions;
- (3) Disobedience or resistance to its lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree or command.

The power of contempt which a judge must have and exercise in protecting the due and orderly administration of justice and in maintaining the authority and dignity of the court is most important and indispensable. But its exercise is a delicate one and care is needed to avoid arbitrary or oppressive conclusions.

267 U.S. 517 (1925)

The limits of power to punish for contempt are "the least possible power adequate to the end proposed."

382 U.S. 162 (1965)

2. Applicable rule of procedure is Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42

Rule 42 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides as follows:

(a) Summary Disposition. A criminal contempt may be punished summarily if the judge certifies that the judge saw or heard the conduct constituting the contempt and that it was committed in the actual presence of the court. The order of contempt shall recite the facts and shall be signed by the judge and entered of record.

(b) Disposition Upon Notice and Hearing. A criminal contempt except as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule shall be prosecuted on notice. The notice shall state the time and place of hearing, allowing a reasonable time for the preparation of the defense, and shall state the essential facts constituting the criminal contempt charged and describe it as such. The notice shall be given orally by the judge in open court in the presence of the defendant or, on application of the United States attorney or of an attorney appointed by the court for that purpose, by an order to show cause or an order of arrest. The defendant is entitled to a trial by jury in any case in which an act of Congress so provides. The defendant is entitled to admission to bail as provided in these rules. If the contempt charged involves disrespect to or criticism of a judge, that judge is disqualified from presiding at the trial or hearing except with the defendant's consent. Upon a verdict or finding of guilt the court shall enter an order fixing the punishment.

3. Vulnerability of action to warrant prosecution for criminal contempt

To warrant a conviction for criminal contempt, the conduct must constitute misbehavior that rises to the level of an obstruction of and an imminent threat to the administration of justice and must be accompanied by an intention on the part of the contemnor to obstruct, disrupt, or interfere with the administration of justice.

509 F.2d 949 (2d Cir. 1975)

866 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989)

A person bound by a court order may be found in criminal contempt for violating it only if the order is clear and definite and the contemnor has knowledge of it.

641 F.2d 1311 (9th Cir. 1981)

Criminal intent is an essential element of the offense and must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. It is a volitional act done by one who knows or should reasonably be aware that his or her conduct is wrongful.

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

641 F.2d 684 (9th Cir. 1981)

553 F.2d 874 (4th Cir. 1977)

An attorney possesses the requisite intent for criminal contempt only if the attorney knows or reasonably should be aware, in view of all of the circumstances—especially in the heat of the controversy—that he or she is exceeding the outermost limits of an attorney's proper role and is hindering, rather than facilitating, the search for truth.

575 F.2d 732 (9th Cir. 1978)

641 F.2d 684 (9th Cir. 1981)

4. Attorney who may prosecute criminal contempt action

In Young v. United States, 481 U.S. 787 (1987), the Supreme Court held that although district courts have authority to appoint private attorneys to prosecute criminal contempt actions, they should ordinarily request that the appropriate prosecuting authority prosecute such contempt actions and should appoint a private prosecutor only if this request is denied. The Court also held that counsel for a party that is a beneficiary of a court order may not be appointed to undertake a criminal contempt prosecution for alleged violations of the order. A private attorney appointed to prosecute a criminal contempt should be as disinterested as a public prosecutor, since the attorney is appointed solely to pursue the public interest in vindicating the court's authority.

5. Rights of defendant in criminal contempt action

Criminal contempts are crimes, and hence the defendant has all the safeguards of a criminal defendant.

600 F.2d 1027 (2d Cir. 1979)

658 F.2d 211 (3d Cir. 1981)

622 F.2d 830 (5th Cir. 1980)

The defendant does not, however, have the right to have the proceeding initiated by indictment or information. It may be initiated by notice.

316 F.2d 718 (10th Cir. 1963)

658 F.2d 211 (3d Cir. 1981)

The defendant is presumed innocent, and his or her guilt must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

305 F.2d 565 (5th Cir. 1962)

766 F.2d 1358 (9th Cir. 1985)

722 F.2d 1261 (6th Cir. 1983)

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42 describes the procedure that must be followed in prosecuting a criminal contempt action. The defendant must be given reasonable time to prepare his or her defense. The defendant must also be accorded sufficient time to engage an attorney of his or her choice, to weigh the merits of the charge, to evaluate possible defenses, and to marshal the evidence deemed necessary to proceed.

570 F.2d 244 (8th Cir. 1978)

When a criminal contempt charge carries a possible penalty of imprisonment, the person charged has the right to counsel, whether the contempt be petty or serious.

548 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1977)

871 F.2d 51 (7th Cir. 1989)

The defendant has the right to testify and to call other witnesses in his or her behalf.

6. Right to jury trial in criminal contempt action depends on potential sentence

The Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial applies to criminal contempt proceedings in the same manner as it applies to every other criminal proceeding. A criminal contempt that is considered a petty offense may be tried without a jury, but there is a right to a jury trial if the contempt is considered a serious offense.

422 U.S. 454 (1975)

681 F.2d 934 (4th Cir. 1982)

There is no maximum penalty authorized by 18 U.S.C. §§ 401 and 402 in criminal contempt prosecutions. Thus, for purposes of the right to a jury trial, the severity of the sentence actually imposed in a criminal contempt proceeding provides the best indication of whether that particular contempt is deemed a serious or petty offense.

391 U.S. 194 (1968)

681 F.2d 934 (4th Cir. 1982)

395 U.S. 147 (1969)

a. Imprisonment

If a sentence of greater than six months' imprisonment is imposed on a criminal contemnor, the contempt is deemed to be a serious offense. If a penalty of less than six months' imprisonment is imposed, the contempt is deemed to be a petty offense. Thus, a defendant in a criminal contempt proceeding has the right to a jury trial if he or she is exposed to a period of imprisonment in excess of six months. The defendant is not entitled to a jury trial if, prior to trial, the court states that the maximum sentence shall be imprisonment for no more than six months.

384 U.S. 373 (1966)

552 F.2d 276 (9th Cir. 1977)

391 U.S. 194 (1968)

570 F.2d 244 (8th Cir. 1978)

395 U.S. 147 (1969)

737 F.2d 1395 (5th Cir. 1984)

422 U.S. 454 (1975)

A jury trial is required if the defendant is tried for various acts of contempt committed during a trial and the sentences imposed aggregate more than six months, even though no sentence of more than six months is imposed for any one act of contempt.

418 U.S. 506 (1974)

b. Fines imposed on individuals

An individual may be punished for criminal contempt without a jury trial if the punishment imposed is not greater than that for a petty offense.

391 U.S. 194 (1968)

Under the current statutory scheme, an individual may be fined up to $5,000 following conviction for a petty offense.

18 U.S.C. §§ 19; 3571(b)(6), (b)(7)

In Blanton v. City of North Las Vegas, 109 S. Ct. 1289 (1989), the Supreme Court noted, in the context of a motor vehicle offense, that it frequently looks to the federal offense classification scheme in deciding when a jury trial must be provided. In concluding that Blanton's offense was a petty offense not requiring a jury trial, the Court reasoned that the $1,000 fine the defendant faced was "well below the $1,500 level set by Congress in its most recent definition of a 'petty' offense." Id. at 1294 n.11.

The Fourth, Ninth, and District of Columbia Circuits have held that if a fine of more than $500 is imposed on an individual criminal contemnor, the contempt is considered a serious offense and the right to a jury trial attaches.

543 F.2d 894 (D.C. Cir. 1976)

552 F.2d 276 (9th Cir. 1977)

548 F.2d 123 (4th Cir. 1977)

In determining that $500 marks the dividing line between petty and serious contempt offenses for purposes of the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial, these courts relied in part on 18 U.S.C. § 1, which defined a petty offense as a misdemeanor for which the maximum punishment was six months' imprisonment or a fine of $500, or both. However, 18 U.S.C. § 1 has since been repealed.

c. Fines imposed on organizations

The Supreme Court has not decided whether there is a constitutional right to a jury trial in a criminal contempt case involving only the imposition of a fine on a corporation or a labor union.

422 U.S. 454 (1975)

In upholding the imposition of a $10,000 fine on a labor union following a non-jury contempt proceeding, however, the Supreme Court indicated that an organization is not entitled to a jury trial when the fine imposed will not cause it serious financial deprivation.

422 U.S. 454 (1975)

The Fourth Circuit has upheld the imposition of a fine of $80,000 on a corporation with a net worth of $540,000 following a non-jury criminal contempt trial.

681 F.2d 934 (4th Cir. 1982)

The Second Circuit has held that regardless of their financial resources, corporations and all other organizations have the right to a jury trial in criminal contempt proceedings in which they are subjected to a fine in excess of $100,000. In cases involving fines of less than $100,000, the trial court must consider whether the fine will have such a significant financial impact upon the organization as to render the contempt a serious offense requiring a jury trial.

882 F.2d 656 (2d Cir. 1989)

Under the current statutory scheme, an organization may be fined up to $10,000 following conviction for a petty offense.

18 U.S.C. §§ 19, 3571(c)(6), 3571(c)(7)

d. Probation

The additional imposition of a term of probation does not raise a petty criminal contempt to the level of a serious offense for purposes of the Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial.

395 U.S. 147 (1969)

7. Trial by another judge

A judge who has been subject to personal attacks throughout the trial should not preside at a post-trial contempt proceeding.

844 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1988)

8. Sentencing of one found guilty of criminal contempt

At the time of sentencing the defendant must be accorded the right of allocution.

A court may impose a fine or a period of imprisonment for criminal contempt but may not both fine and imprison a defendant.

546 F.2d 187 (5th Cir. 1977)

548 F.2d 252 (8th Cir. 1977)

The severity of the sentence is left to the discretion of the trial court.

279 F.2d 401 (9th Cir. 1960)

If found guilty of criminal contempt by a jury, the contemnor may be sentenced to an unlimited number of months or years in prison or fined an unlimited number of dollars.

665 F.2d 521 (5th Cir. 1981) (witness sentenced to five years for refusing to testify)

An unusually severe sentence risks being set aside on appeal.

D. Summary Contempt

Section 401, Title 18 of the United States Code provides that a court of the United States shall have the power to punish by fine or imprisonment the misbehavior of any person in its presence or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice.

Rule 42(a) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides as follows:

A criminal contempt may be punished summarily if the judge certifies that the judge saw or heard the conduct constituting the contempt and that it was committed in the actual presence of the court. The order of contempt shall recite the facts and shall be signed by the judge and entered of record.

Given the absence of such fundamental due process requirements as notice and an opportunity to be heard in Rule 42(a), the Supreme Court has held that Rule 42(a) is a rule of necessity, creating a narrow category of contempt reserved for exceptional circumstances.

333 U.S. 56 (1948)

866 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989)

382 U.S. 162 (1965)

Unless there is a "compelling reason for an immediate remedy," the procedure articulated in Rule 42(b) is normally to be followed.

382 U.S. 162 (1965)

421 U.S. 309 (1975)

1. Nature of conduct punishable as summary contempt

Instant action may be necessary where immediate corrective steps are needed to restore order and maintain the dignity and authority of the court.

403 U.S. 212 (1971)

418 U.S. 506 (1974)

To preserve order in the courtroom for the proper conduct of business, the court must act instantly to suppress disturbance or violence or physical obstruction or disrespect to the court when it occurs in open court.

267 U.S. 517 (1925)

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

Summary contempt is available only when the conduct constituting the contempt occurs within the sight or hearing of the judge. For misbehavior to rise to the level of an obstruction of the judicial process, there must be a "material disruption or obstruction." Mere disrespect or affront to the judge's sense of dignity is not sufficient. Discourtesy is not sufficient.

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

592 F.2d 1215 (1st Cir. 1979)

There must be misconduct that actually obstructs the court in the performance of its judicial duty.

292 F.2d 806 (7th Cir. 1961)

443 F.2d 314 (9th Cir. 1971)

All elements of the contempt must be within the personal observation of the judge.

443 F.2d 314 (9th Cir. 1971)

Trial judges must be on guard against confusing behavior that offends their sensibilities with behavior that obstructs the administration of justice. The contemnor must have the intent to obstruct, disrupt, or interfere with the administration of justice.

563 F.2d 889 (8th Cir. 1977)

A summary contempt proceeding is appropriate only when there is a need for immediate action to put an end to disruptive acts in the presence of the court.

371 F.2d 810 (2d Cir. 1967)

695 F.2d 236 (7th Cir. 1982)

619 F.2d 1354 (9th Cir. 1980)

It is questionable whether the failure of a spectator to simply stand at an opening or closing ceremony is conduct that threatens the judge or disrupts or obstructs court proceedings. If the refusal to stand is accompanied by some disturbance, disorder, or interruption, however, it may be considered a disruptive act.

412 F.2d 848 (7th Cir. 1969)

509 F.2d 752 (9th Cir. 1975)

461 F.2d 389 (7th Cir. 1972)

2. Caution to be observed in exercising summary contempt power

Summary contempt power must be limited to "the least possible power adequate to the end proposed."

434 F.2d 861 (2d Cir. 1970)

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

The exercise of the power of contempt is a delicate one, and care is needed to avoid arbitrary or oppressive conclusions. This rule of caution is especially important when the contempt charged has in it the element of personal criticism of or attack on the judge. The judge must banish any impulse for reprisal, but should not bend backward and injure the authority of the court by too great a showing of leniency.

267 U.S. 517 (1925)

3. Finding attorney in summary contempt

Although citations of attorneys for summary contempt have been affirmed on appeal, the courts of appeals have stated that where the line between vigorous advocacy and actual obstruction defies strict delineation, doubts should be resolved in favor of vigorous advocacy.

461 F.2d 389 (7th Cir. 1972)

552 F.2d 498 (3d Cir. 1977)

Before an attorney may be found guilty of contempt there must be a showing that the attorney knew or reasonably should have known that he or she was exceeding the outermost limits of an attorney's proper role and hindering rather than facilitating the search for truth. There must be some sort of actual damaging effect on judicial order before an attorney may be held in criminal contempt.

575 F.2d 732 (9th Cir. 1978)

There must be a compelling reason for an immediate remedy before an attorney may be found in summary contempt.

733 F.2d 441 (7th Cir. 1984)

4. Summary contempt procedure

a. Warning should be given

The preferable procedure is for the court to warn the individual that his or her continuation of the conduct at issue will result in a citation for contempt. A warning may be effective to prevent further disorder.

351 F.2d 91 (6th Cir. 1965)

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977) (warning required)

866 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989) (warning required where reasonable person would not know court considered conduct contumacious)

The court should also allow the individual to be heard before citing him or her for contempt, unless doing so would be inconsistent with the preservation of order.

546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977)

866 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989)

b. Judge must prepare, sign, and file order of contempt

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42(a) requires the court to enter an order of contempt. In that order the court must certify that it saw or heard the conduct constituting the contempt and that it took place in the court's presence.

The purpose of the certification in the order of contempt is to permit informed appellate review. A criminal contempt order stands or falls on the specifications of wrongdoing on which it is based. For that reason the order of contempt must recite with accuracy the conduct that caused the court to find someone in summary contempt. Conclusory language and general citations to the record are insufficient.

435 F.2d 861 (9th Cir. 1970)

608 F.2d 767 (9th Cir. 1979)

451 F.2d 372 (9th Cir. 1971)

It is probably advisable to incorporate the relevant portion of the trial record into the order as an adjunct to the specific charges. The incorporation of the record is not, however, a substitute for a specific recital by the court of the facts that led to the contempt citation.

The form of the order of contempt may be as follows:

In conformity with Rule 42(a) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure I hereby certify that [here insert a detailed recital of the acts of contempt].

Because of the foregoing conduct, which obstructed and disrupted the court in its administration of justice, I sentenced [name of contemnor] to ____ days in jail, [or fined him or her the sum of ____ dollars] the said jail sentence to commence [at once/at the conclusion of the trial].

The order of contempt should be dated and must be signed by the judge.

It need not be sworn.

461 F.2d 345 (7th Cir. 1972)

The court may commit the contemnor to jail immediately and thereafter file its order of contempt. The order should, however, be prepared and filed as quickly as possible.

176 F.2d 163 (2d Cir. 1949)

194 F.2d 948 (6th Cir. 1952)

182 F.2d 880 (9th Cir. 1950)

The court may cite an individual in summary contempt and file a certificate but defer sentencing until the conclusion of the trial. If, however, the court does not feel that an immediate sanction is necessary, it is probably wiser for the court to proceed under Rule 42(b) than to proceed under the summary procedure of Rule 42(a).

191 F.2d 157 (9th Cir. 1951)

619 F.2d 1354 (9th Cir. 1980)

552 F.2d 498 (3d Cir. 1977)

629 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1980)

592 F.2d 1215 (1st Cir. 1979)

The circuits are in conflict as to whether a person may be cited in summary contempt at the conclusion of the trial.

592 F.2d 1215 (1st Cir. 1979) (court may wait until end of trial to charge someone with summary contempt)

619 F.2d 1354 (9th Cir. 1980) (court may not wait until end of trial to charge someone with summary contempt)

c. Manner in which punishment is imposed

Contempts in the presence of the court are punishable by the court summarily. The contemnor does not have the right to counsel, to notice, to a jury, or to an opportunity to present a defense.

The contemnor should, however, be given an opportunity before being sentenced to speak in his or her own behalf in the nature of a right of allocution.

418 U.S. 488 (1974)

In imposing punishment, the judge may properly take into consideration the willfulness and deliberateness of the defiance of the court's order, the seriousness of the consequences of the contumacious behavior, the necessity of effectively terminating the defendant's defiance as required by the public interest, and the importance of deterring such acts in the future.

563 F.2d 889 (8th Cir. 1977)

The court may imprison or fine the contemnor but may not do both.

The court may not summarily impose a sentence of imprisonment in excess of six months. If the court feels that a sentence in excess of six months would be appropriate, the court must proceed by notice under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42(b) and accord the contemnor a jury trial.

The judge may impose summary contempt sanctions repeatedly during trial. However, if a single hearing is held for multiple incidents of contempt, the sentence imposed at the hearing may not exceed six months.

844 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1988)

E. Recalcitrant Witness

Section 1826(a), Title 28 of the United States Code provides that whenever a witness refuses without just cause to comply with an order of the court to testify, the court may summarily order the witness confined until such time as he or she is willing to comply with the court's order.

Confinement shall not exceed the life of

1. the court proceeding, or
2. the term of the grand jury.

In no event may the confinement last longer than 18 months.

Confinement under 28 U.S.C. § 1826(a) is coercive, not punitive. Its sole purpose is to compel the contemnor to provide the requested testimony.

862 F.2d 430 (2d Cir. 1988)

1. Court must order witness to respond

The court must give the witness an explicit, unambiguous order to answer the question.

421 U.S. 309 (1975)
380 F.2d 993 (2d Cir. 1967)

2. Witness must be warned

The trial court must explicitly warn the witness of the consequences of continued refusal to answer a proper question.

380 F.2d 993 (2d Cir. 1967)
546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977)

3. Recalcitrant witness should first be cited in civil contempt

The court should first apply coercive pressure by means of civil contempt and make use of the more drastic criminal sanctions only if the disobedience continues.

355 U.S. 66 (1957)
384 U.S. 364 (1966)

If there is a compelling reason for immediate, strong action, a trial court may, however, hold in criminal contempt a witness who has refused to comply with the court's order to testify at trial (as contrasted with refusing to testify before a grand jury) and may summarily order his or her imprisonment pursuant to Rule 42(a) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

421 U.S. 309 (1975)
456 F.2d 382 (1st Cir. 1972)

605 F.2d 736 (4th Cir. 1979)
675 F.2d 643 (5th Cir. 1982)

It is improper to coerce a witness into testifying at the trial of a codefendant by imposing a harsh sentence on charges to which the witness has pled guilty and indicating that the sentence may later be reduced if the witness cooperates.

822 F.2d 205 (2d Cir. 1987)

The witness must be accorded the opportunity to present his or her reasons for refusing to testify.

629 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1980)

The witness is not entitled to a trial before a jury in a civil contempt proceeding.

530 F.2d 681 (6th Cir. 1976)

600 F.2d 420 (3d Cir. 1979)

4. Witness cited for civil contempt should be advised of possibility of purging the contempt

When a witness is committed in civil contempt, he or she should be advised that the contempt can be purged if he or she answers the question at issue. The witness should also be advised to inform the court immediately if he or she decides to answer the question.

571 F.2d 111 (2d Cir. 1978)

After a witness has been committed, he or she may be brought back into the courtroom and given a chance to purge the civil contempt and thereby avoid prosecution for criminal contempt.

542 F.2d 381 (7th Cir. 1976)

5. Witness cited for civil contempt may be subject to punishment for criminal contempt, and should be so advised

A witness committed in civil contempt should be advised that if he or she does not purge that contempt, he or she may be prosecuted for criminal contempt and thereafter punished by a fine or commitment for that criminal contempt.

227 F.2d 848 (9th Cir. 1955)

There must be a forthright positive notification to the witness that he or she is subject to an additional punitive sanction if the court chooses to invoke it and that the coercive restraint for civil contempt does not relieve the witness of a possible penal sentence.

227 F.2d 848 (9th Cir. 1955)

254 F.2d 687 (9th Cir. 1958)

But see 804 F.2d 1004 (7th Cir. 1986) (recommending, but not requiring, notification)

Like any other witness, a testifying defendant who refuses to answer a proper question, after being directed to do so by the court, is subject to sanctions for criminal contempt.

525 F.2d 703 (2d Cir. 1975)

546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977)

6. Procedure if witness is confined for civil contempt but fails to purge the contempt

If a witness refuses to answer a question, the trial judge should instruct the jury that it should not speculate as to what the testimony would have been.

509 F.2d 312 (D.C. Cir. 1974)

At the conclusion of the trial, a witness held in civil contempt should be released from custody, but thereafter a proceeding under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 42(b) may be commenced to cite the witness for criminal contempt.

254 F.2d 687 (9th Cir. 1958)

If the court acts to cite the witness summarily for criminal contempt during the progress of the trial, it may proceed under Rule 42(a). If the court proceeds after the termination of the trial, it must proceed under Rule 42(b), as the defendant's refusal to answer the question no longer obstructs the progress of the trial.

421 U.S. 309 (1975)

546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977)

7. Procedure upon refusal by witness to respond to question before grand jury

A witness who refuses to answer a question before a grand jury may not be cited for criminal contempt under Rule 42(a) because the misbehavior is not in the actual presence of the court. The proper procedure is under Rule 42(b), according to which the witness is given notice and a reasonable time within which to prepare his or her defense.

382 U.S. 162 (1965)

482 F.2d 1016 (9th Cir. 1973)

509 F.2d 1252 (2d Cir. 1975)

608 F.2d 640 (5th Cir. 1979)

643 F.2d 226 (5th Cir. 1981)

A civil contempt order for refusal to testify before a grand jury is without further effect after expiration of the grand jury's term or the purging of the contempt.

863 F.2d 667 (9th Cir. 1988)

8. Procedure if witness claims inability to remember or gives evasive or equivocal answers

A witness's equivocal response, evasive answer, or false disclaimer of knowledge or memory constitutes contemptuous conduct.

703 F.2d 653 (2d Cir. 1983)

A false assertion of memory loss constitutes a refusal to testify.

653 F.2d 419 (9th Cir. 1981)

A claimed inability to remember is the equivalent of a refusal to testify if it is both obviously false and intentionally evasive and obstructive.

706 F.2d 1266 (2d Cir. 1983)

However, the government must prove these elements by clear and convincing evidence, either extrinsic or intrinsic.

706 F.2d 1266 (2d Cir. 1983)

A civil contempt proceeding on an asserted memory loss requires a three-step analysis:

1. The government must make out a prima facie showing of contempt.
2. The witness must provide some explanation, on the record, for failing to respond to a proper question.
3. If the witness meets his or her burden of production by claiming a loss of memory, the government must carry its burden of proof by demonstrating that the witness did in fact remember the events in question.

653 F.2d 419 (9th Cir. 1981)

The government has the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence the falsity of a witness's claim of loss of memory. That proof may include extrinsic proof, such as tape recordings or documents, or it may be found in the witness's demeanor and answers.

694 F.2d 917 (2d Cir. 1982)

9. Civil contempt followed by criminal contempt is not double jeopardy

Civil contempt followed by criminal contempt for the same refusal to answer a proper question does not subject the witness to double jeopardy.

330 U.S. 258 (1947)

566 F.2d 402 (2d Cir. 1977)

355 U.S. 66 (1957)

571 F.2d 111 (2d Cir. 1978)

384 U.S. 364 (1966)

10. Punishment for civil contempt

A witness who refuses to answer a proper question at trial may not be confined for civil contempt beyond the duration of the trial itself.

227 F.2d 844 (9th Cir. 1955)

A witness who refuses to answer a proper question before a grand jury may not be confined for civil contempt beyond the term of the grand jury and in no event longer than 18 months.

28 U.S.C. § 1826(a)

It may be necessary to release the contemnor from confinement for civil contempt when the confinement has lost its coercive force and no longer serves its purpose.

862 F.2d 430 (2d Cir. 1988)

See supra pp. 50-51.

11. Punishment for criminal contempt

Neither 18 U.S.C. § 401 nor Rule 42 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure sets a maximum sentence for criminal contempt. The severity of the sentence is within the discretion of the trial court.

542 F.2d 381 (7th Cir. 1976) (witness found in criminal contempt and sentenced to four years' imprisonment for refusing to testify)

565 F.2d 24 (2d Cir. 1977) (witness found in criminal contempt and sentenced to five years' imprisonment for refusing to testify)

The court may not impose both a fine and imprisonment for a single act of contempt.

822 F.2d 481 (5th Cir. 1987)

12. Right to trial in criminal contempt proceeding

The witness has the right to a jury trial in a criminal contempt proceeding unless, prior to the hearing, the court limits the maximum sentence to six months or less.

384 U.S. 373 (1966)

502 F.2d 813 (7th Cir. 1974)

391 U.S. 194 (1968)

571 F.2d 1105 (9th Cir. 1978)

13. Appointment of counsel

If indigent, the witness is entitled to appointed counsel for a civil contempt or Rule 42(b) criminal contempt proceeding.

484 F.2d 1215 (4th Cir. 1973)

14. Witness serving sentence is not entitled to credit for time served on contempt citation

If a witness is already serving a sentence, the court may order that sentence to be interrupted by imprisonment for civil contempt.

504 F.2d 1165 (7th Cir. 1974)

572 F.2d 1373 (9th Cir. 1978)

569 F.2d 775 (3d Cir. 1978)

865 F.2d 578 (3d Cir. 1989)

A federal prisoner is not entitled to credit for time spent in custody for a civil contempt unless the court expressly makes the contempt confinement concurrent with a prior criminal sentence.

569 F.2d 775 (3d Cir. 1978)

The circuits are in conflict as to whether a federal district court has authority under 28 U.S.C. § 1826(a) to interrupt a contemnor's pre-existing state sentence for service of a federal civil contempt sentence.

574 F.2d 78 (2d Cir. 1978) (federal tolling of state sentence intrudes on sovereignty of state court)

865 F.2d 578 (3d Cir. 1989) (federal tolling of state sentence permissible)

F. Disruptive Defendant

A disruptive defendant may not be permitted by his or her behavior to obstruct the orderly progress of a trial.

397 U.S. 337 (1970)

1. Options available to court

After a disruptive defendant has been warned, the trial court has these options:

1. cite the defendant for contempt;
2. remove the defendant from the courtroom until the defendant promises to conduct himself or herself properly; or
3. permit the defendant to remain in court but have him or her bound and gagged.

397 U.S. 337 (1970)

2. Defendant should be warned

Before taking action against a disruptive defendant, the court should warn the defendant of the consequences of his or her continued disruptive behavior.

397 U.S. 337 (1970)

3. Ejecting defendant

The court may order the removal of a defendant from the courtroom if the defendant interrupts the proceedings. The court should state that the defendant may return anytime after he or she assures the court that there will be no further disturbance.

507 F.2d 563 (10th Cir. 1974)

647 F.2d 854 (8th Cir. 1981)

569 F.2d 504 (9th Cir. 1978)

If a defendant who is appearing pro se disrupts the proceedings, the court should first warn the defendant that if there is any further disruption the court will deny him or her the right to proceed pro se and will direct standby counsel to take over. If there is any further disruption tion, the court should direct standby counsel to take over. If the defendant continues to be disruptive, he or she may then be removed from the courtroom.

587 F.2d 968 (9th Cir. 1978)

If a defendant is removed from the courtroom, electronic arrangements should be made so that the defendant can hear the proceedings.

507 F.2d 563 (10th Cir. 1974)

After being ejected, a disruptive defendant may reclaim the right to be present by assuring the court that he or she will not engage in inappropriate conduct.

587 F.2d 968 (9th Cir. 1978)

4. Shackling and gagging of defendant

If a defendant's behavior disrupts court proceedings, the court may keep the defendant in the courtroom and have him or her shackled or gagged, or both, in order to prevent a continuation of the disruptive behavior.

526 F.2d 226 (8th Cir. 1975)

526 F.2d 698 (5th Cir. 1976)

531 F.2d 281 (5th Cir. 1976)

In making the decision to shackle a defendant, the court may take into consideration the defendant's past conduct in the courtroom, prior escapes from custody, disruptive conduct in other proceedings, and prison disciplinary record.

531 F.2d 281 (5th Cir. 1976)

The court may not delegate the decision whether to shackle the defendant to the marshal, but may rely on the marshal's advice.

843 F.2d 421 (10th Cir. 1988)

If the court orders that a defendant be shackled or shackled and gagged, the court must make a full statement on the record of the reasons for such action. The defendant and his or her counsel should be given an opportunity to respond to the reasons presented and to try to persuade the court that such measures are unnecessary.

526 F.2d 698 (5th Cir. 1976)
531 F.2d 281 (5th Cir. 1976)

843 F.2d 421 (10th Cir. 1988)

If a defendant is shackled, the court should take precautions, such as bringing the defendant to the courtroom out of the presence of the jury, to ensure that any prejudicial effect is minimized.

843 F.2d 421 (10th Cir. 1988)
861 F.2d 1061 (8th Cir. 1988)

Part V. Evidence

A. Admissibility

1. Coconspirator statements

According to Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d), "A statement is not hearsay if—

"(1) . . .

"(2) The statement is offered against a party and is . . .

"(E) a statement by a coconspirator of a party during the course and in furtherance of the conspiracy."

(Although the rule states that this type of out-of-court statement is not hearsay, the statements that are made admissible by this rule are typical hearsay statements, that is, they are out-of-court statements offered at trial to prove the truth of the matter asserted.)

Before commencement of trial, government counsel should be advised that no proposed coconspirator statement shall be presented in evidence until it has first been presented to the court out of the presence of the jury and the court has ruled that it will be received in evidence.

a. Court's concern must be with statements offered to prove truth of matter asserted

The rules regarding coconspirator statements relate to utterances that would otherwise be banned by the hearsay rule.

417 F.2d 1116 (2d Cir. 1969)

A statement does not fall within the ambit of the coconspirator rule unless it would otherwise be excludable by reason of being a hearsay declaration. A declaration that has relevance for a reason other than the truth of the matter asserted may be admissible, if relevant, as a non-hearsay "verbal act."

417 U.S. 211 (1974)
424 F.2d 657 (2d Cir. 1970)

561 F.2d 406 (1st Cir. 1977)

Tape recordings introduced to show the scope of certain gambling operations, but not offered to prove the truth of the contents of any of the conversations, are not hearsay. The recordings are thus admissible as verbal acts.

566 F.2d 929 (5th Cir. 1978)

b. Findings required

For a statement to be admissible as a coconspirator statement, the court must find that

1. there was a conspiracy in existence;
2. the declarant was a member of that conspiracy;
3. the defendant against whom the statement is offered was a member of that conspiracy;
4. the statement was made in furtherance of that conspiracy; and
5. the statement was made during the course of that conspiracy.

1. In determining whether a proposed coconspirator statement is admissible, the trial court may take into consideration the content of the statement itself

At one time most circuits held that in determining whether an alleged coconspirator statement was admissible, a trial court could not take into consideration the proposed statement itself.

In Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987), however, the Supreme Court reversed the rulings of those circuits and held that a trial court may take into consideration the content of an alleged coconspirator statement itself in determining whether that statement is to be admitted as a coconspirator statement.

The Supreme Court left open the question whether the court could rely solely on the proposed coconspirator statement to determine that it was admissible as a coconspirator statement.

In addition, in Bourjaily, the Supreme Court ruled that if a coconspirator statement met all the evidentiary requirements for admission, the trial court need not make a further inquiry as to whether the statement met the challenge of the Confrontation Clause.

2. There must have been a conspiracy in existence

Before admitting the statement of a coconspirator, the trial judge must find that a conspiracy did in fact exist.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)
573 F.2d 1046 (8th Cir. 1978)
582 F.2d 1128 (7th Cir. 1978)

The existence of a conspiracy and the defendant's participation in it are preliminary questions of fact that must be resolved by the court pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 104(a) before a coconspirator statement may be admitted into evidence.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)

The court must apply a preponderance-of-the-evidence standard in determining whether such preliminary questions of fact have been established under Rule 104(a).

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)

The court may consider the contents of the proposed coconspirator statement itself, along with any independent evidence of the conspiracy, in applying Rule 104(a) to resolve the preliminary factual question whether the existence of a conspiracy has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)

It is not necessary, however, that a conspiracy be charged in the indictment.

538 F.2d 466 (2d Cir. 1976)	665 F.2d 126 (7th Cir. 1981)
540 F.2d 465 (10th Cir. 1976)	855 F.2d 1388 (9th Cir. 1988)
623 F.2d 1165 (6th Cir. 1980)

Nor is it necessary that the declarant be charged as a codefendant.

542 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1976)

It is sufficient that there be a joint venture.

669 F.2d 1169 (7th Cir. 1981)

676 F.2d 146 (5th Cir. 1982)

The joint venture on which admission of a coadventurer's statement is based need not be the same as the charged conspiracy, if any, and need not have an illegal objective.

855 F.2d 1388 (9th Cir. 1988)

3. The statement must have been made by a member of the conspiracy

To be admissible the statement must have been made by one who was a member of the conspiracy at the time of the statement, but the declarant need not be named in the indictment as a codefendant.

542 F.2d 186 (4th Cir. 1976)

609 F.2d 603 (2d Cir. 1979)

4. The defendant against whom the statement is offered must have been a member of that conspiracy

The statement of an alleged coconspirator is not admissible against an accused without proof of the latter's membership in the conspiracy.

373 F.2d 168 (2d Cir. 1967)

537 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1976)

It is admissible against one who joins the conspiracy after the statement was made.

652 F.2d 449 (5th Cir. 1981)

718 F.2d 830 (7th Cir. 1983)

729 F.2d 441 (7th Cir. 1984) (provided conspiracy was in existence when statement was made)

757 F.2d 163 (7th Cir. 1985)

757 F.2d 1486 (4th Cir. 1985)

794 F.2d 821 (2d Cir. 1986) (provided that before joining, accused was generally aware of what coconspirators had been doing and saying)

5. The statement must have been made in furtherance of that conspiracy

By the terms of Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2)(E), a coconspirator's statement is not admissible unless it was made "in furtherance of the conspiracy." All circuits recognize that this is a prerequisite to admissibility, but they vary in the strictness with which they interpret it. Some courts are more ready than others to find a statement to be in furtherance of a conspiracy.

The following are comments by many circuits on the "in furtherance" problem.

Mere conversation between coconspirators or merely narrative descriptions were not "in furtherance." To be admissible, declarations must further the common objectives of the conspiracy.

591 F.2d 513 (9th Cir. 1979)

Casual comments that neither were intended to further the conspiracy nor had the effect of furthering it in any way were not "in furtherance."

600 F.2d 154 (8th Cir. 1979)

A statement intended to convince a prospective purchaser that the declarant had a good connection and meant business was "in furtherance."

603 F.2d 1029 (2d Cir. 1979)

Statements of a coconspirator identifying a fellow coconspirator as his source of narcotics were "in furtherance."

604 F.2d 1102 (8th Cir. 1979)

A statement that the defendant was a primary buyer of marijuana was "in furtherance."

821 F.2d 234 (5th Cir. 1987)

Statements made to a girlfriend of one defendant in an attempt to induce her to join him in his activity and to keep her abreast of its current status were "in furtherance."

605 F.2d 870 (5th Cir. 1979)

A mere conversation between coconspirators is not "in furtherance" of the conspiracy.

608 F.2d 1028 (5th Cir. 1979)

Statements that are nothing more than casual conversations about past events are not "in furtherance."

637 F.2d 95 (2d Cir. 1980)

A statement made for the purpose of inducing continued participation in a conspiracy is "in furtherance."

642 F.2d 281 (9th Cir. 1981)

Mere conversations between coconspirators or merely narrative declarations are not "in furtherance." The statements must further the common objectives of the conspiracy or set in motion transactions that are an integral part of the conspiracy. In short, they must assist the coconspirators in achieving their objectives. Statements designed to induce a listener to join a conspiracy are "in furtherance." Mere casual admissions of culpability to someone the declarant has individually decided to trust are not "in furtherance."

720 F.2d 548 (9th Cir. 1983)

Statements between coconspirators that provide reassurance, or serve to maintain trust and cohesiveness among them or to inform each other of the current status of a conspiracy are "in furtherance."

714 F.2d 238 (3d Cir. 1983)

870 F.2d 822 (2d Cir. 1989)

868 F.2d 524 (2d Cir. 1989)

Statements of reassurance that serve to maintain trust and cohesiveness or to give information relative to the current status of a conspiracy, statements identifying fellow conspirators, statements identifying a coconspirator as the source of narcotics, and statements designed to induce a coconspirator to act are all statements made "in furtherance."

759 F.2d 1316 (8th Cir. 1985)

Where a main objective of a conspiracy has not been attained or abandoned and concealment is essential to the purpose of the objective, attempts to conceal the conspiracy are "in furtherance."

770 F.2d 57 (6th Cir. 1985)

The statements of a declarant need not actually further the conspiracy to be admissible. It is enough that they be intended to promote the conspiratorial objectives. Statements that explain events important to the conspiracy in order to facilitate the conspiracy are "in furtherance."

798 F.2d 380 (10th Cir. 1986)

The "in furtherance" requirement is satisfied when a conspirator is apprised of the progress of a conspiracy or when the statements are designed to induce his or her assistance.

801 F.2d 86 (2d Cir. 1986)

832 F.2d 705 (2d Cir. 1987)

Statements by a coconspirator are "in furtherance" if the statements prompt the listener to respond in a way that facilitates the carrying out of criminal activity.

813 F.2d 31 (2d Cir. 1987)

In ruling on whether a statement has been made "in furtherance" of a conspiracy, a court must refer to and abide by the decisions of its own circuit.

6. The statement must have been made during the course of that conspiracy

To be admissible a coconspirator's statement must be made during the life of the conspiracy.

314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963)

A statement made by one alleged coconspirator after his or her arrest may be admissible against that coconspirator but is not admissible against the remaining coconspirators.

565 F.2d 573 (9th Cir. 1977)

802 F.2d 1108 (9th Cir. 1986)

586 F.2d 1147 (7th Cir. 1978)

The arrest of one coconspirator does not necessarily terminate the conspiracy. The test is not the arrest of one or more of the coconspirators but whether the remainder of the coconspirators are able to continue with the conspiracy. The statements of coconspirators still at large are admissible.

533 F.2d 1006 (6th Cir. 1976)
689 F.2d 1262 (6th Cir. 1982)

802 F.2d 1108 (9th Cir. 1986)

c. Court alone determines admissibility of coconspirator's statement; jury plays no role in determination

At one time the court admitted coconspirator statements and instructed jurors that they were to consider those statements only if they independently found that the statements met all of the evidentiary requirements for the admissibility of coconspirator statements. Now, the trial court alone determines the admissibility of such statements, and the jury plays no role in that determination.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)
662 F.2d 1148 (5th Cir. 1981)

d. Requisites for admissibility of an alleged coconspirator statement need be proved only by a preponderance of the evidence

Before Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987), the circuits were split as to the quantum of proof required for the admission of coconspirator statements. Bourjaily holds, however, that the requisites are to be proven by a preponderance of the evidence.

e. Court controls order of proof

The Supreme Court in Bourjaily specifically declined to express an opinion on the proper order of proof that a trial court should follow in concluding that the preliminary facts relevant to admission of a coconspirator statement have been proven by a preponderance of the evidence. The order of the admission of proof is within the discretion of the court. The court may thus admit declarations by alleged coconspirators prior to the time that all of the requirements for admissibility have been established by independent evidence.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171, 176 n.1 (1987)
519 F.2d 516 (9th Cir. 1975)
658 F.2d 654 (9th Cir. 1981)

The court has the discretion to require the government to establish the elements of admissibility prior to receiving coconspirator statements, or to admit the out-of-court statements on the condition that the prosecution subsequently produce independent evidence of the conspiracy.

519 F.2d 516 (9th Cir. 1975)

639 F.2d 1305 (5th Cir. 1981)

606 F.2d 149 (6th Cir. 1979)

664 F.2d 826 (11th Cir. 1981)

It is preferable, whenever possible, that the government's independent proof of conspiracy be introduced first, thereby avoiding the danger of injecting inadmissible hearsay into the record in anticipation of proof that never materializes.

573 F.2d 1046 (8th Cir. 1978)

689 F.2d 154 (10th Cir. 1982)

590 F.2d 575 (5th Cir. 1979)

The court should at least require the government to preview the evidence that it believes brings the evidence within the coconspirator rule before allowing introduction of the coconspirator statement.

826 F.2d 619 (7th Cir. 1987)

However, a pretrial hearing need not be held if it will be time-consuming and repetitive.

829 F.2d 988 (10th Cir. 1987)

f. Court must make findings relative to requisites of admissibility

At the conclusion of all the evidence, the court must on appropriate motion determine as a factual matter whether the prosecution has shown by a preponderance of the evidence all of the requisites for the admissibility of a coconspirator statement about which evidence has been received. If the court concludes that the prosecution has not borne its burden, the statement may not remain in evidence for consideration by the jury. In that event the judge must decide whether the prejudice arising from the erroneous admission can be cured by a cautionary instruction to the jury to disregard the statement or whether a mistrial must be declared.

550 F.2d 1294 (2d Cir. 1977)

628 F.2d 632 (1st Cir. 1980)

590 F.2d 575 (5th Cir. 1979)

635 F.2d 664 (8th Cir. 1980)

617 F.2d 831 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

729 F.2d 1302 (11th Cir. 1984)

It is error for the court to rule on the admissibility of coconspirator statements at the close of the government's case.

830 F.2d 938 (8th Cir. 1987)

Even if counsel has not made a motion, it is wise policy for the trial court to place in the record an explicit ruling that the government has established all of the necessary requisites for the admissibility of the coconspirator statements that were admitted together, with such details as seem appropriate under the circumstances.

603 F.2d 444 (3d Cir. 1979)

679 F.2d 534 (5th Cir. 1982)

635 F.2d 664 (8th Cir. 1980)

g. In-court testimony of coconspirator is receivable

Although an out-of-court statement made by a coconspirator must meet all the tests of admissibility, a coconspirator may testify in court as to all aspects of the conspiracy.

538 F.2d 461 (1st Cir. 1976)

692 F.2d 693 (10th Cir. 1982)

h. Effect of dismissal of conspiracy charge against declarant

If, at the close of the government's case, the court dismisses the conspiracy charge against a defendant whose out-of-court hearsay statements were admitted, some courts have held that either the defendant's statements must be withdrawn from the consideration of the jury or a mistrial declared.

550 F.2d 431 (9th Cir. 1976)

578 F.2d 277 (10th Cir. 1978)

Others have held that the statements need not be withdrawn.

550 F.2d 1294 (2d Cir. 1977)

613 F.2d 391 (2d Cir. 1979)

604 F.2d 546 (7th Cir. 1979)

i. Right of confrontation with regard to coconspirator statements

No inquiry concerning the Confrontation Clause need be made concerning a proposed coconspirator statement if evidence has established that the statement is in fact a coconspirator statement.

Bourjaily v. United States, 483 U.S. 171 (1987)

855 F.2d 1388 (9th Cir. 1988)

j. Coconspirator statements received in civil actions

Coconspirator statements are admissible in civil actions in the same manner as they are in criminal actions.

630 F.2d 1111 (5th Cir. 1980)

756 F.2d 1467 (10th Cir. 1985)

k. Spousal privilege with regard to coconspirator statements

When husband and wife are engaged in a criminal conspiracy, a coconspirator statement of either is admissible.

577 F.2d 1356 (9th Cir. 1978)

l. Application to joint ventures

Coconspirator exceptions apply to statements by joint venturers.

669 F.2d 1169 (7th Cir. 1981)

855 F.2d 1388 (9th Cir. 1988)

676 F.2d 146 (5th Cir. 1982)

m. Pretrial disclosure to defendants of coconspirator statements

Defendants are not entitled to discover coconspirator statements before trial.

811 F.2d 257 (4th Cir. 1987)

825 F.2d 1537 (11th Cir. 1987)

n. In-court presence of coconspirator declarant not needed

The coconspirator declarant need not be present for cross-examination as a prerequisite for the admission of his or her out-of-court coconspirator statement.

475 U.S. 387 (1986)

802 F.2d 344 (9th Cir. 1986)

791 F.2d 37 (3d Cir. 1986)

803 F.2d 969 (9th Cir. 1986)

2. Identification testimony

Identification testimony is admissible provided that any pretrial identification procedure was not impermissibly suggestive or, if impermissibly suggestive, did not create a substantial risk of misidentification.

Reliability is the linchpin in determining the admissibility of identification testimony.

432 U.S. 98 (1977)

a. Court must determine admissibility of identification testimony

Determining the admissibility of identification testimony is a two-step process:

1. The court must decide whether the out-of-court identification procedure was unnecessarily suggestive.
2. If the procedure is found to have been unnecessarily suggestive, the court must then determine whether, considering the totality of circumstances, the suggestive procedure created a substantial risk of misidentification.

If the answer to either of these inquiries is negative, testimony as to the identification is admissible.

409 U.S. 188 (1972)

599 F.2d 518 (3d Cir. 1979)

432 U.S. 98 (1977)

671 F.2d 1112 (8th Cir. 1982)

527 F.2d 1345 (5th Cir. 1976)

684 F.2d 380 (6th Cir. 1982)

545 F.2d 1217 (9th Cir. 1976)

726 F.2d 1301 (8th Cir. 1984)

In assessing the reliability of the identification testimony in light of the suggestive identification procedure, the court must consider

1. the opportunity of the witness to observe the criminal at the time of the crime;
2. the degree of attention of the witness at the time of the crime;
3. the accuracy of the witness's prior description of the criminal;
4. the level of certainty demonstrated by the witness at pretrial confrontation; and
5. the length of time between the crime and the pretrial confrontation.

432 U.S. 98 (1977)

724 F.2d 249 (1st Cir. 1984)

703 F.2d 1076 (9th Cir. 1983)

735 F.2d 818 (5th Cir. 1984)

b. Lineup

A lineup is the preferable means of identification.

527 F.2d 1345 (5th Cir. 1976)

An accused does not, however, have a right to demand a lineup.

538 F.2d 750 (7th Cir. 1976)

631 F.2d 1229 (5th Cir. 1980)

564 F.2d 983 (2d Cir. 1977)

The decision whether to grant a defendant's motion for a lineup is within the discretion of the trial judge.

606 F.2d 853 (9th Cir. 1979)

756 F.2d 636 (8th Cir. 1985)

Even though there is no constitutional right to compel the government to conduct a lineup, the court can and should compel the government to do so if the interests of justice and fair play require it.

717 F.2d 1206 (8th Cir. 1983)

The defendant may be compelled by force, if necessary, to attend a lineup.

571 F.2d 675 (1st Cir. 1978)

c. Identification in court without prior lineup is disfavored

An in-court identification can itself be impermissibly suggestive, for example, if a defendant is the only black person in the courtroom and is seated next to defense counsel at trial.

734 F.2d 938 (2d Cir. 1984)

When informed that identification is a critical issue in a case, the court would be well-advised to direct the government to conduct an out-of-court lineup.

699 F.2d 585 (2d Cir. 1983)

Defense counsel may seek court permission to seat two or more persons at counsel's table, to have no one at counsel's table, or to have a number of individuals resembling the defendant in court.

653 F.2d 1332 (9th Cir. 1981)

There is no constitutional entitlement to an in-court lineup or other particular method of lessening the suggestiveness of in-court identification, such as seating the defendant elsewhere in the room. Such matters are within the discretion of the trial court.

784 F.2d 1361 (9th Cir. 1986) (a dissent in this case speaks about how prejudicial an in-court identification is)

To ensure the accuracy and reliability of an in-court identification by an eyewitness, procedures such as placing the defendant in the courtroom audience or staging an in-court lineup should be employed wherever necessary.

776 F.2d 412 (3d Cir. 1985)

Prior to a proposed in-court identification, the court may permit the defendant to sit in the back of the courtroom with other persons of similar appearance.

507 F.2d 898 (3d Cir. 1975)

The substitution of another person for the defendant at counsel's table prior to an in-court identification is unethical.

653 F.2d 1332 (9th Cir. 1981)

d. Single-photograph identification or single-person show-up is suspect

Display of a single photograph of the suspect alone is one of the most suggestive and therefore most objectionable methods of pretrial identification.

432 U.S. 98 (1977)

528 F.2d 1242 (7th Cir. 1976)

521 F.2d 1370 (7th Cir. 1975)

Testimony relative to a single-person show-up immediately after a crime occurs may be admissible.

626 F.2d 697 (9th Cir. 1980)

772 F.2d 482 (9th Cir. 1985)

652 F.2d 521 (5th Cir. 1981)

e. Witness may testify in court to out-of-court identification of accused

According to Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(1)(C), an identifying statement is not hearsay if the declarant testifies at trial to an identification that he or she has previously made, after perceiving the person identified, and is subject to cross-examination concerning the statement.

A witness may be permitted to testify that he or she previously identified a photograph of the defendant and may be allowed to identify at trial the particular photograph he or she identified during the pretrial investigation.

555 F.2d 447 (5th Cir. 1977)

A witness may testify to a pretrial photo-spread identification even though he or she is unable to make a positive in-court identification at trial.

507 F.2d 898 (3d Cir. 1975)

711 F.2d 99 (8th Cir. 1983)

512 F.2d 182 (3d Cir. 1975)

A witness who has identified a defendant from a photo spread is properly permitted to identify the defendant in court at trial.

767 F.2d 574 (9th Cir. 1985)

f. Equivocal identifications

A witness is permitted to identify a certain photograph of the defendant in court at trial and testify to selecting that photograph from a photo spread as "resembling" the perpetrator of the crime. Although a prior identification may be equivocal, the jury is entitled to give it such weight as it will after hearing the testimony of the witness under direct and cross-examination.

447 F.2d 1377 (2d Cir. 1971)

564 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1977)

The fact that an identification in court is less than positive does not render it inadmissible.

583 F.2d 748 (5th Cir. 1978)

605 F.2d 910 (5th Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 646 F.2d 873 (5th Cir. 1980)

g. Mug shots are inadmissible

Admission of mug shots is in conflict with rules of evidence prohibiting the introduction of testimony regarding a defendant's bad character or past criminal record.

504 F.2d 878 (5th Cir. 1974)
525 F.2d 414 (7th Cir. 1975)

548 F.2d 1224 (5th Cir. 1977)

If the introduction of mug shots is unavoidable, steps must be taken to minimize the prejudicial impact on the defendant.

568 F.2d 207 (1st Cir. 1978)

h. Defendant entitled to cautionary jury instruction relative to identification testimony

Upon request, the defendant is entitled to a special instruction to the jury on the issue of identification, which emphasizes the dangers inherent in identification testimony, the need to scrutinize such evidence with care, and the need to find the circumstances of the identification convincing beyond a reasonable doubt before returning a verdict of guilty.

469 F.2d 552 (D.C. Cir. 1972)
564 F.2d 983 (2d Cir. 1977)

572 F.2d 9 (1st Cir. 1978)

i. Admissibility of expert testimony relative to identification of accused

The circuits are divided on the question whether to admit expert testimony on eyewitness identification issues.

The Third, Fifth, and Sixth Circuits hold that expert testimony on identification issues is admissible.

736 F.2d 1103 (6th Cir. 1984)

753 F.2d 1224 (3d Cir. 1985) (discussing impact of Federal Rules of Evidence 403, 702, and 704 on admission of expert testimony on identification)

786 F.2d 1308 (5th Cir. 1986)

The Seventh and Ninth Circuits hold that expert testimony on eyewitness identification issues is inadmissible.

833 F.2d 1296 (9th Cir. 1987)

884 F.2d 1016 (7th Cir. 1989)

The trial court has discretion to admit identification testimony by an expert witness if the expert proposes to testify as to identification features not within the everyday experience of laypersons.

506 F.2d 1165 (9th Cir. 1974)

525 F.2d 386 (8th Cir. 1975)

559 F.2d 561 (9th Cir. 1977)

566 F.2d 884 (4th Cir. 1977) (held, contrary to general rule, that expert could point out similarities and differences between features of defendant and those of person shown in photograph)

There should be an offer of proof outside the presence of the jury before identification testimony by an expert is received. The court can then determine whether the expert can materially assist the jurors beyond their common experience.

506 F.2d 1165 (9th Cir. 1974)

753 F.2d 1224 (3d Cir. 1985)

j. Identification of defendant by law enforcement officers

Identification of the defendant by a police officer or by a parole officer is to be avoided, if possible, because those individuals cannot be fully cross-examined without the risk of eliciting prior criminal activity of the defendant.

557 F.2d 666 (9th Cir. 1977)

729 F.2d 1158 (8th Cir. 1984)

k. Defendant must be identified at trial as being perpetrator of the crime

In every criminal case, the government is required to prove the identity of the person who committed the crime. To support a conviction, the government must present evidence at trial that the defendant was the perpetrator of the charged crime. This is generally provided by an in-court identification of the accused; however, it can also be inferred from other evidence.

629 F.2d 1089 (5th Cir. 1980)

689 F.2d 752 (7th Cir. 1982)

For example, it is not necessary to have an in-court identification if there is testimony of a pretrial identification of the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime.

702 F.2d 1159 (D.C. Cir. 1983)

3. Tape recordings of conversations

a. Tape recordings may be admitted into evidence

It is within the court's discretion to admit tapes of telephone conversations.

526 F.2d 971 (7th Cir. 1975)

Tapes are to be admitted only if (1) they are authentic, accurate, and trustworthy, and (2) they are audible and comprehensible enough for a jury to consider them.

627 F.2d 293 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

707 F.2d 872 (6th Cir. 1983)

Tape recordings are deemed inadmissible if substantial portions of them are so inaudible as to render them untrustworthy.

540 F.2d 465 (10th Cir. 1976)

707 F.2d 872 (6th Cir. 1983)

Before admitting tapes, the court should require the government to produce evidence concerning the competency of the operator, the fidelity of the equipment, the absence of any alterations in the tapes, and the identities of the speakers.

551 F.2d 64 (5th Cir. 1977)

A tape is generally admissible unless the unintelligible portions are so substantial that the recording as a whole is untrustworthy.

514 F.2d 22 (9th Cir. 1975)

864 F.2d 494 (7th Cir. 1988)

Admission of tape recordings containing inaudible portions is a matter within the discretion of the trial court.

548 F.2d 228 (8th Cir. 1977)

Even if the tape has poor audibility, it is admissible if enough of the conversation is audible and relevant to the purpose for which it is admitted.

571 F.2d 71 (1st Cir. 1978)

574 F.2d 305 (5th Cir. 1978)

b. Pretrial procedure with regard to tape recordings

The trial court may condition the use of tape recordings on the advance preparation of an accurate transcript.

515 F.2d 130 (2d Cir. 1975)

540 F.2d 465 (10th Cir. 1976)

When a transcript is to be used to supplement tape recordings, the parties should first seek to arrive at a stipulated transcript. If the parties cannot agree, each side should produce its own transcript or its own version of disputed portions of the tape.

563 F.2d 1246 (5th Cir. 1977)

789 F.2d 975 (1st Cir. 1986)

A pretrial conference is the preferred manner of handling the problem of obtaining a stipulation as to the accuracy of a transcript of a recorded conversation.

535 F.2d 938 (5th Cir. 1976)

It is preferable that tape-recorded conversations between the defendant and a government informant be edited to exclude the defendant's use of ugly racial epithets.

782 F.2d 533 (5th Cir. 1986)

c. Court may permit jurors to have transcripts as they listen to tape recordings

It is within the discretion of the court to permit jurors to have transcripts as they hear tapes played.

508 F.2d 1134 (8th Cir. 1975)

872 F.2d 385 (11th Cir. 1989)

If jurors are permitted to have transcripts, the court must give an instruction to the effect that it is the words that they hear that are decisive, not those that they read in the transcripts.

547 F.2d 1048 (8th Cir. 1977)

d. Courtroom procedure with regard to tape recordings

If transcripts are to be used, they should be passed out to jurors immediately prior to the playing of the tapes and then collected immediately after the tapes have been played.

If the defense and prosecution disagree on the contents of portions of a tape, the jurors are to be given transcripts of the version of both sides.

525 F.2d 289 (2d Cir. 1975)

864 F.2d 494 (7th Cir. 1988)

627 F.2d 293 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

The tape may then be played as the jurors are looking at one transcript and replayed as the jurors are looking at another transcript.

525 F.2d 289 (2d Cir. 1975)

e. Jurors may rehear tape recordings after they have begun deliberations

It is within the discretion of the trial court to replay tapes at the request of the jury after it has retired for deliberation.

548 F.2d 228 (8th Cir. 1977)

569 F.2d 1386 (5th Cir. 1978)

It is also within the court's discretion to permit jurors to refer to transcripts during the replaying.

561 F.2d 1252 (7th Cir. 1977)

f. Transcripts of tape recordings to jury room

The court in its discretion may admit properly authenticated transcripts of tape recordings as evidence and permit them to be taken to the jury room along with the rest of the exhibits.

789 F.2d 975 (1st Cir. 1986)

859 F.2d 1144 (2d Cir. 1988)

The court has discretion to permit the jury to take to the jury room any tape recordings that have been admitted as exhibits during the trial. Recordings that have not been admitted as exhibits may not be taken to the jury room.

749 F.2d 338 (6th Cir. 1984)

If the accuracy of a transcript cannot be verified, it is an abuse of discretion to permit jurors to read it.

707 F.2d 872 (6th Cir. 1983)

4. Balancing probative value of evidence against prejudicial effect

Rules 403, 609(a), and 609(b) of the Federal Rules of Evidence require the trial court to balance the probative value of evidence against its prejudicial effect.

a. Balancing under Rule 403

According to Rule 403, evidence, although relevant, may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

1. Balancing within discretion of trial court

The balancing required by Rule 403 is entrusted to the broad discretion of the trial court.

557 F.2d 309 (2d Cir. 1977)

584 F.2d 268 (8th Cir. 1978)

560 F.2d 507 (2d Cir. 1977)

874 F.2d 483 (7th Cir. 1989)

2. Criteria to be applied

"Unfair prejudice" is defined in the Notes of the Advisory Committee on the Proposed Federal Rules of Evidence as "an undue tendency to suggest decision on an improper basis, commonly, though not necessarily, an emotional one."

588 F.2d 1283 (9th Cir. 1979)

790 F.2d 651 (7th Cir. 1986)

602 F.2d 1192 (5th Cir. 1979)

The prejudice envisioned by Rule 403 is prejudice to the criminal defendant.

736 F.2d 1103 (6th Cir. 1984)

The exclusion of evidence under Rule 403 is an extraordinary remedy that is to be invoked only sparingly.

665 F.2d 616 (5th Cir. 1982)

755 F.2d 748 (11th Cir. 1985)

734 F.2d 750 (11th Cir. 1984)

For evidence to be excluded, its prejudicial effect must substantially outweigh its probative value.

684 F.2d 343 (6th Cir. 1982)

685 F.2d 1293 (11th Cir. 1982)

755 F.2d 1269 (7th Cir. 1985)

870 F.2d 1125 (6th Cir. 1989) (evidence of flight)

A major function of Rule 403 is to exclude matter of scant or cumulative probative force, dragged in by its heels for the sake of its prejudicial effect.

753 F.2d 991 (11th Cir. 1985)

Evidence that is otherwise admissible is not rendered inadmissible because it is strongly probative on an essential element of an offense.

591 F.2d 861 (D.C. Cir. 1978)

618 F.2d 934 (2d Cir. 1980)

In determining whether the probative value of evidence is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, it is a sound rule that the balance should generally be struck in favor of admission when the evidence indicates a close relationship to the offense charged. The necessity of the evidence to prove the government's case is a factor to be used in weighing the evidence's admissibility under the balancing test. In so weighing the evidence, the court should be mindful of the heavy burden the government bears to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt and should not unduly restrict the government in the proof of its case.

591 F.2d 861 (D.C. Cir. 1978)

3. Timing

It is well for the trial court to delay the admission of evidence falling within Rule 403 until virtually all of the other proof has been introduced, as the court is then in a better position to weigh the probative worth of the evidence against the prejudicial effect of it.

560 F.2d 507 (2d Cir. 1977)

4. Court's reasoning should be placed on the record

If the trial court decides to exclude relevant evidence by invoking Rule 403, it should confront the problem explicitly, acknowledging and weighing on the record both the prejudicial effect and the probative value of the proposed evidence.

539 F.2d 924 (2d Cir. 1976)

The court should articulate the factors considered in the balancing of the probative value against the unfair prejudice.

669 F.2d 894 (3d Cir. 1982)

5. Minimizing prejudice

The prejudicial effect of evidence may be minimized by the elimination of inflammatory or unnecessary details and by cautionary instructions delivered by the court.

637 F.2d 1052 (5th Cir. 1981)

b. Balancing under Rule 609(a)

According to Rule 609(a)

For the purpose of attacking the credibility of a witness, evidence that the witness has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if elicited from the witness or established by public record during cross-examination but only if the crime (1) was punishable by death or imprisonment in excess of one year under the law under which the witness was convicted, and the court determines that the probative value of admitting this evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect to the defendant, or (2) involved dishonesty or false statement, regardless of the punishment.

1. Timing of rulings on Rule 609(a) matters is discretionary

The trial court has broad discretion as to the timing of its rulings relating to the admissibility of the defendant's prior convictions under Rule 609(a).

565 F.2d 170 (1st Cir. 1977)
640 F.2d 190 (9th Cir. 1980)

668 F.2d 375 (8th Cir. 1981)

Several decisions have suggested that an advance ruling regarding the admissibility of the defendant's prior convictions is desirable, where feasible, so that the defendant can make an informed decision whether to testify.

565 F.2d 170 (1st Cir. 1977)
608 F.2d 1175 (9th Cir. 1979) (en banc), rev'd on other grounds, 469 U.S. 38 (1984)
646 F.2d 1283 (8th Cir. 1981)
668 F.2d 375 (8th Cir. 1981)

Other decisions have suggested that the trial court is better able to weigh a prior conviction's probative value against its prejudicial effect after hearing the direct testimony of the defendant.

469 U.S. 38 (1984)
624 F.2d 840 (8th Cir. 1980)

2. No balancing permitted with crimes of dishonesty or false statement

The admission of prior convictions for crimes involving "dishonesty or false statement" is not within the discretion of the court. Proof of convictions of that nature must be admitted.

548 F.2d 1315 (9th Cir. 1976)

Crimes involving dishonesty or false statement are crimes such as perjury or subornation of perjury, false statement, criminal fraud, embezzlement, false pretense, or any other offense the commission of which involves some element of deceit, untruthfulness, or falsification bearing on the defendant's propensity to testify truthfully.

547 F.2d 1079 (9th Cir. 1976)

The court does not have discretion to apply Rule 403's balancing test with respect to felony convictions or to invoke Rule 403 to exclude evidence of conviction for a crime of dishonesty.

Green v. Bock Laundry Machine Co., 109 S. Ct. 1981, 104 L. Ed. 2d 557 (1989)
615 F.2d 277 (5th Cir. 1980)
659 F.2d 118 (9th Cir. 1981)
663 F.2d 349 (1st Cir. 1981)

If it is not apparent on its face that a crime involved dishonesty, the court must hold a hearing to determine whether the crime did in fact involve dishonesty.

613 F.2d 1045 (D.C. Cir. 1979)
622 F.2d 107 (5th Cir. 1980)

3. Balancing under Rule 609(a) required to protect defendant, rather than other witnesses, from potential prejudice

Rule 609(a) permits balancing to be done only to determine whether a prior felony conviction's probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect "to the defendant." The rule requires that proof of all prior felony convictions of government witnesses "be admitted." It is error to exclude proof of a government witness's prior felony conviction on the ground that the prejudicial effect on the witness outweighs the probative value of his or her testimony.

Green v. Bock Laundry Machine Co., 109 S. Ct. 1981, 104 L. Ed. 2d 557 (1989)
561 F.2d 803 (9th Cir. 1977)
562 F.2d 673 (D.C. Cir. 1977)
741 F.2d 577 (3d Cir. 1984)

Embarrassment of witnesses and prejudice to parties other than criminal defendants are insufficient reasons to exclude evidence of a witness's criminal convictions.

753 F.2d 199 (1st Cir. 1985)

4. Criteria to be applied in balancing

When the defendant is the witness, the factors that a district court should consider in balancing a prior conviction's probative value against its prejudicial effect are (1) the impeachment value of the prior crime; (2) the temporal relationship between the conviction and the subsequent history of the defendant; (3) the similarity between the prior offense and the offense charged; (4) the importance of the defendant's testimony; and (5) the centrality of the credibility issue at trial.

772 F.2d 482 (9th Cir. 1985)

5. Danger in admitting proof of conviction of same or similar crime to that charged

If the prior conviction is for the same offense as that charged, or an offense similar to that charged, particularly careful consideration is required before the conviction may be admitted.

553 F.2d 782 (2d Cir. 1977)

555 F.2d 1273 (5th Cir. 1977)

Evidence of a prior conviction for the very crime for which a defendant is on trial may be devastating in its potential impact on a jury. There is a substantial risk that all exculpatory evidence will be overwhelmed by a jury's human tendency to draw a conclusion that is impermissible in law: because the defendant did it before, he or she must have done it again.

772 F.2d 482 (9th Cir. 1985)

6. Trial court should place its reasoning on the record

The trial court should make its determination after a hearing on the record and should make an explicit finding that the evidence's probative value outweighs or does not outweigh its prejudicial effect on the defendant.

608 F.2d 626 (5th Cir. 1979)

642 F.2d 1083 (7th Cir. 1981)

613 F.2d 1045 (D.C. Cir. 1979)

817 F.2d 461 (8th Cir. 1987)

Some circuits do not require an on-the-record balancing.

680 F.2d 1304 (10th Cir. 1981)

680 F.2d 867 (1st Cir. 1982)

7. Evidence admissible with regard to conviction of witness

Questioning about a prior conviction of a witness is limited to the fact of conviction, the date of conviction, and the nature of the offense.

705 F.2d 210 (7th Cir. 1983)
706 F.2d 519 (5th Cir. 1983)

788 F.2d 1240 (7th Cir. 1986)

Cross-examination is limited to the facts admissible on direct examination.

636 F.2d 621 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

8. Court must instruct jury regarding proper use of prior-conviction evidence

In admitting evidence of prior convictions of a defendant, the court should instruct the jury that the evidence is to be considered only on the issue of credibility, and not as substantive evidence of guilt.

651 F.2d 451 (6th Cir. 1981)

9. Admissibility of prior conviction pending appeal

A prior conviction is admissible even though the conviction is pending appeal.

526 F.2d 745 (8th Cir. 1978)
707 F.2d 892 (6th Cir. 1983)

10. Court may place conditions on the exclusion of a prior conviction

The court may exclude proof of a prior conviction on the condition that the defendant not represent that he or she has never been in trouble with the law or that he or she has always been a law-abiding citizen.

405 F. Supp. 938 (E.D.N.Y. 1975)
608 F.2d 1175 (9th Cir. 1979)

c. Balancing under Rule 609(b)

Evidence of a conviction under Rule 609(b) is not admissible if a period of more than 10 years has elapsed since the date of the conviction or the date of the release of the witness from the confinement imposed for that conviction, whichever is later, unless the court determines that, in the interests of justice, the conviction's probative value, supported by specific facts and circumstances, substantially outweighs its prejudicial effect.

1. Such convictions are only rarely admissible

Convictions more than 10 years old are to be admitted rarely and only under exceptional circumstances.

565 F.2d 479 (7th Cir. 1977)

578 F.2d 528 (4th Cir. 1978)

There is in effect a presumption in the rule that convictions more than 10 years old are more prejudicial than helpful and should be excluded.

588 F.2d 1145 (6th Cir. 1978)

2. Court's reasoning must be placed on the record if it departs from the 10-year prohibition

If the trial court departs from the 10-year prohibition, it must make specific findings on the record as to the particular facts and circumstances it has considered in determining that the conviction's probative value substantially outweighs its prejudicial impact.

578 F.2d 528 (4th Cir. 1978)

588 F.2d 1145 (6th Cir. 1978)

603 F.2d 1022 (1st Cir. 1979)

633 F.2d 1313 (9th Cir. 1980)

699 F.2d 461 (9th Cir. 1982)

Contra 822 F.2d 802 (8th Cir. 1987)

The court must find not merely that the probative value of the conviction outweighs the prejudicial effect but that the probative value substantially outweighs the prejudicial effect.

578 F.2d 528 (4th Cir. 1978)

5. Receipt of expert testimony

a. Receipt of expert testimony within discretion of trial court

The trial court has broad discretion to determine whether a proffered expert is, in fact, an expert.

509 F.2d 1263 (8th Cir. 1975)

865 F.2d 164 (8th Cir. 1988)

869 F.2d 348 (7th Cir. 1989)

Whether a witness may be qualified as an expert is a question of preliminary fact to be decided by the trial court.

608 F.2d 796 (9th Cir. 1979)

b. Criteria to be applied by trial court

For the use of expert testimony to be warranted, two elements are required:

1. The subject of the inference must be so distinctly related to some science, profession, business, or occupation as to be beyond the knowledge of the average layperson.
2. The witness must have such knowledge or experience in the field or calling as to make it appear that his or her opinion or inference will probably aid the trier in the search for truth.

393 F.2d 417 (9th Cir. 1968)

548 F.2d 1261 (6th Cir. 1977)

553 F.2d 1013 (6th Cir. 1977)

865 F.2d 164 (8th Cir. 1988)

Expert testimony is proper only if the court finds that the offered testimony is reasonably likely to add to common understanding of the particular issue before the jury.

590 F.2d 381 (1st Cir. 1979)

884 F.2d 1016 (7th Cir. 1989)

The essential difference between opinion evidence that is not that of an expert witness and opinion evidence that is that of a qualified expert is that in the latter case, the witness can answer hypothetical questions and thus testify not only from the facts or data perceived but also from that which is made known to the witness at or before his or her appearance at trial.

620 F.2d 399 (3d Cir. 1980)

c. Procedure with regard to expert testimony

Before permitting an expert to testify, it is proper for the court to conduct upon request a voir dire examination of the witness, out of the presence of the jury, in order to determine whether the witness should be permitted to testify as an expert.

543 F.2d 1156 (5th Cir. 1976)

The court may question the witness and should permit opposing counsel to question the witness to determine whether the witness is, in fact, an expert.

511 F.2d 25 (6th Cir. 1975)
559 F.2d 561 (9th Cir. 1977)

If facts or data on which the expert bases opinion or inference are of the type reasonably relied on by experts in a particular field in forming opinions or inferences, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence.

647 F.2d 1048 (10th Cir. 1981) 866 F.2d 587 (3d Cir. 1989)
865 F.2d 164 (8th Cir. 1988) 869 F.2d 348 (7th Cir. 1989)

This rule makes available to the expert all of the data that an expert in the witness's area of expertise would normally rely on in forming an opinion, without requiring that such data be admissible in evidence. Under the rule the expert is free to give an opinion relying on the types of data an expert in the witness's area of expertise would normally use in forming an opinion.

650 F.2d 846 (6th Cir. 1981)
869 F.2d 348 (7th Cir. 1989)

The facts necessary to the foundation of an expert's testimony need not be perceived by the witness at trial. The witness may testify to relevant matters based on facts in evidence or those made known to the witness prior to trial.

655 F.2d 512 (3d Cir. 1981)

When an expert's opinion is based on facts not admissible in evidence, the court should make a threshold factual inquiry to determine whether the data providing the basis for the opinion are of a type reasonably relied on by experts in that field to form such opinions, and in making such an inquiry, the court may inquire into the relevance of the data as well as their reliability. Deference ought to be accorded the expert's view that experts in his or her field reasonably rely on such sources.

751 F.2d 1484 (5th Cir. 1985)

d. Opinion testimony on ultimate issue

Federal Rule of Evidence 704(a) provides that testimony in the form of an opinion is not objectionable because it embraces an ultimate issue to be decided by the trier of fact. One purpose of the Federal Rules of Evidence was to make opinion evidence admissible if it would be of assistance to the trier of fact.

593 F.2d 837 (8th Cir. 1979)

866 F.2d 587 (3d Cir. 1989) (permitting expert testimony on roles played by defendants in narcotics ring)

Federal Rule of Evidence 704(b) forbids expert testimony as to whether the defendant had the criminal intent required to commit the offense charged. However, the rule permits opinion testimony bearing on the defendant's mental state provided it does not take the form of a mere conclusion as to the defendant's mens rea at the time of the offense charged.

862 F.2d 717 (8th Cir. 1988)

6. Requiring defendant to display body or to don clothing

It is not a violation of the Fifth Amendment to require a defendant

1. to display to the jury an arm tattoo.

564 F.2d 755 (7th Cir. 1977)

762 F.2d 1314 (9th Cir. 1984)

2. to shave a beard.

575 F.2d 1310 (10th Cir. 1978)

722 F.2d 1431 (9th Cir. 1983)

3. to don an article of clothing.

433 F.2d 937 (9th Cir. 1970)

572 F.2d 687 (9th Cir. 1978)

575 F.2d 1310 (10th Cir. 1978)

704 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1983)

4. to give voice samples.

702 F.2d 299 (2d Cir. 1983)

704 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1983)

5. to give handwriting samples.

544 F.2d 353 (9th Cir. 1976)

732 F.2d 1017 (1st Cir. 1984) (held, however, that it is a violation of the privilege to require defendant to write words dictated to him or her because that requires defendant in effect to say: "This is the way I spell these words.")

6. to stand for purposes of identification.

719 F.2d 1491 (10th Cir. 1983)

7. to remove a pair of glasses.

719 F.2d 1491 (10th Cir. 1983)

8. to expose his or her teeth and gums to viewing by a witness.

873 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1989)

9. to utter certain phrases so that the jury can compare the defendant's voice with the voice on a tape of a drug transaction.

823 F.2d 246 (8th Cir. 1987)

7. Evidence improperly admitted or admitted for limited purpose

A potential error caused by the improper introduction of evidence or the admission of evidence that is properly admitted for only a limited purpose may oftentimes be avoided by a prompt and forceful admonition to the jury.

When considering whether a new trial should be granted, an appellate court will consider the forcefulness and timeliness of the trial court's curative instruction.

561 F.2d 763 (9th Cir. 1977)

618 F.2d 60 (9th Cir. 1980)

Curative instructions may not be adequate where the prejudicial evidence bears on a factual issue vital to the case.

855 F.2d 518 (8th Cir. 1988)(polygraph test)

874 F.2d 1255 (9th Cir. 1989)

a. Prior inconsistent statement

When a witness's prior inconsistent statement is admitted in evidence, the court must upon request by counsel instruct the jury that the statement was admitted only for the purpose of impeaching the witness's testimony in court and is not to be considered as evidence of the truth of the matter referred to in the statement.

493 F.2d 750 (5th Cir. 1974)
592 F.2d 1038 (9th Cir. 1979)

b. Evidence admissible for one purpose but not for another

If evidence is admissible for one purpose but is inadmissible for another, the trial judge must upon request instruct the jury as to the limited purpose for which the evidence may be considered.

592 F.2d 680 (2d Cir. 1979)
837 F.2d 906 (10th Cir. 1988)

c. When evidence has been withdrawn from jury's consideration

When the court withdraws evidence from the jury's consideration, it should instruct the jury to disregard the evidence.

517 F.2d 710 (5th Cir. 1975)
860 F.2d 706 (7th Cir. 1988)

8. "Other crimes" evidence

Federal Rule of Evidence 404(b) provides that [e]vidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith. It may, however, be admissible for other purposes, such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident.

The court need not make a preliminary finding that the government has proved the "other crime" or "similar act" by a preponderance of the evidence before it submits the evidence to the jury. Instead, such evidence should be admitted if there is sufficient evidence to sustain a finding by the jury that the defendant committed the other crime or similar act.

Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 108 S. Ct. 1496, 99 L. Ed. 2d 771 (1988)

The threshold inquiry a court must make before admitting other-crimes evidence under Rule 404(b) is whether the evidence is relevant and probative of a material issue other than character.

Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 108 S. Ct. 1496, 99 L. Ed. 2d 771 (1988)

In the Rule 404(b) context, other-crimes evidence is relevant only if the jury can reasonably conclude that the act occurred and that the defendant was the actor.

Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 108 S. Ct. 1496, 99 L. Ed. 2d 771 (1988)

Questions of relevance conditioned on proof of a fact are dealt with under Federal Rule of Evidence 104(b): "In determining whether the government has introduced sufficient evidence to meet Rule 104(b), the trial court neither weighs credibility nor makes a finding that the government has proved the conditional fact by a preponderance of the evidence. The court simply examines the evidence in the case and decides whether the jury could reasonably find the conditional fact by a preponderance of the evidence."

Huddleston v. United States, 485 U.S. 681, 108 S. Ct. 1496, 99 L. Ed. 2d 771 (1988)

9. Right of confrontation

The Sixth Amendment provides in part: "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right . . . to be confronted with the witnesses against him"

This provision confers on an accused the right to confront face-to-face in the courtroom those who give testimony against him or her.

The Confrontation Clause reflects a preference for face-to-face confrontation at trial. A primary interest secured by confrontation is the right of cross-examination.

380 U.S. 415 (1965)

448 U.S. 56 (1980)

If an out-of-court declarant testifies in court, there is no confrontation problem because the accused then has the right to confront that witness and to cross-examine him or her with reference to the out-of-court statement.

399 U.S. 149 (1970)

402 U.S. 622 (1971)

If an out-of-court declarant does not testify in court, his or her out-of-court statement may or may not be admitted into evidence.

a. Findings court must make if defendant objects to admission of out-of-court statement

If a defendant objects to the admission of an out-of-court statement as being a denial of his or her right of confrontation, the trial court must, before admitting the evidence, find

1. that the declarant is unavailable; and
2. that the out-of-court statement bears adequate "indicia of reliability."

448 U.S. 56 (1980)
860 F.2d 873 (8th Cir. 1988)

b. Finding of nonavailability of out-of-court declarant

An out-of-court declarant is not unavailable unless the prosecution has made a good faith but unsuccessful effort to obtain the declarant's presence at trial.

390 U.S. 719 (1968)	448 U.S. 56 (1980)
399 U.S. 149 (1970)	860 F.2d 873 (8th Cir. 1988)
408 U.S. 204 (1972)

The declarant is unavailable if his or her absence was procured by the defendant.

98 U.S. 145 (1878)

The declarant is unavailable if he or she is beyond the process of the court at the time of trial.

408 U.S. 204 (1972)

However, where the government released illegal alien witnesses at the border and failed to make adequate provision for their return, they were not unavailable.

824 F.2d 344 (5th Cir. 1987)

c. Proof of adequacy of indicia of reliability

An unavailable declarant's out-of-court statement will be admissible only if the statement is marked by adequate indicia of reliability.

798 F.2d 931 (7th Cir. 1986)
862 F.2d 630 (7th Cir. 1988)

870 F.2d 496 (9th Cir. 1989)

The primary concern of the reliability inquiry must be to determine whether, under the circumstances, the unavailability of the declarant for cross-examination deprives the jury of a satisfactory basis for evaluating the truth of the declarant's out-of-court statement.

522 F.2d 833 (9th Cir. 1976)

To be admitted into evidence, an out-of-court statement must bear sufficient indicia of reliability to provide the jurors with an adequate basis for evaluating the truth of the statement.

603 F.2d 42 (8th Cir. 1979)

d. Admissibility of out-of-court statements within exceptions to hearsay rule

Certain hearsay exceptions rest on such solid foundations that admission of virtually any evidence within them comports with the substance of the constitutional protection. Reliability can be inferred without more in a case in which the evidence falls within a firmly rooted hearsay exception. In other cases the evidence must be excluded, absent a showing of particularized guarantees of trustworthiness.

448 U.S. 56 (1980) (dying declarations and cross-examined, prior trial testimony are two hearsay exceptions so firmly rooted that their admission as out-of-court statements does not violate Confrontation Clause)

The following have been identified as factors attesting to the reliability of a challenged out-of-court statement:

1. The statement carried on its face a warning to the jury against giving it undue weight.
2. The declarant was in a position to know the identity and role of the participants in the crime.
3. The possibility was remote that the statement was founded on faulty recollection.
4. It was not likely that the declarant misrepresented the defendant's involvement.
5. The statement was spontaneous.

400 U.S. 74 (1970)

If the out-of-court statement does not fall within one of the "firmly rooted hearsay exceptions," there must be a case-by-case analysis to determine whether the right of confrontation is violated.

552 F.2d 833 (9th Cir. 1976)

557 F.2d 309 (2d Cir. 1977)

603 F.2d 42 (8th Cir. 1979)

604 F.2d 1199 (9th Cir. 1979)

633 F.2d 77 (8th Cir. 1980)

635 F.2d 1183 (6th Cir. 1980)

866 F.2d 1326 (11th Cir. 1989)

The fact that an extrajudicial declaration may be admissible under the Federal Rules of Evidence does not by itself establish compliance with the Confrontation Clause.

448 U.S. 56 (1980)

870 F.2d 496 (9th Cir. 1989)

The residual hearsay exception of Federal Rule of Evidence 804(b)(5) is not a firmly rooted hearsay exception. Thus, indicia of reliability sufficient to satisfy the Confrontation Clause must be demonstrated before evidence is admitted under this rule.

866 F.2d 1185 (10th Cir. 1989)

Neither the Confrontation Clause nor Federal Rule of Evidence 802 is violated by the admission of a witness's out-of-court identification statement if the witness testifies at trial but is unable to recall the basis for his or her prior identification because of memory loss. It is not necessary to determine that the testimony of such a witness is also marked by "adequate indicia of reliability" if the witness is subject to unrestricted cross-examination at trial.

United States v. Owens, 484 U.S. 554, 108 S. Ct. 838, 98 L. Ed. 2d 951 (1988)

e. Coconspirator statements not challenged by right of confrontation

No inquiry concerning the Confrontation Clause need be made concerning a coconspirator's statement if evidence has established that the statement is in fact a coconspirator's statement.

475 U.S. 387 (1986)

483 U.S. 171 (1987)

f. Defendant's right of confrontation includes right to be present at all stages of trial

It was error for a trial court to exclude a defendant from the courtroom while the court questioned deputy sheriffs, bailiffs, and jurors to determine whether an altercation in the courtroom might have prejudiced the defendant's right to a fair trial.

562 F.2d 596 (8th Cir. 1977)

It is error for the trial court to exclude the accused from the taking of a deposition of a witness.

593 F.2d 815 (8th Cir. 1979)

The defendant has the right to be present during an in camera hearing regarding jury misconduct.

596 F.2d 344 (8th Cir. 1979)

See Bench Comment, 1986, No. 4 (FJC): "Limitations on a defendant's right under Rule 43 to be present at every stage of trial."

g. Placement of screen between defendant and adverse witness violates Confrontation Clause Placement of a screen between the defendant and the witness testifying against him or her violates the Confrontation Clause. This clause guarantees a defendant the right to a face-to-face encounter with all witnesses testifying before the trier of fact.

Coy v. Iowa, 108 S. Ct. 2798, 101 L. Ed. 2d 857 (1988)

h. Effect of defendant's voluntary absence from trial

The defendant may waive his or her right of confrontation by voluntary absence from trial.

524 F.2d 167 (4th Cir. 1975)

611 F.2d 41 (4th Cir. 1979)

557 F.2d 930 (2d Cir. 1977)

If the defendant is absent, the court should try to find out where the defendant is and why he or she is absent. A statement by defense counsel that counsel does not know where the defendant is does not constitute waiver of the defendant's right to be present.

853 F.2d 249 (4th Cir. 1988)

Even when a defendant is voluntarily absent from trial, the trial court should not proceed with the trial until it has weighed the factors favoring continuance of the trial against those favoring the presence of the defendant at the trial.

524 F.2d 167 (4th Cir. 1975)

596 F.2d 137 (5th Cir. 1979)

557 F.2d 930 (2d Cir. 1977)

In a single-defendant trial, proceeding without the defendant is ordinarily not proper.

853 F.2d 249 (4th Cir. 1988)

i. Defendant has right to be present during jury selection

The defendant has the right to be present during selection of the jury and to participate in it. This right includes the right to be present during any in camera questioning of prospective jurors.

637 F.2d 131 (3d Cir. 1980)

639 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1980)

It is reversible error for the trial court to impanel the jury in the defendant's absence without a personal on-the-record waiver of his or her right to be present. A representation by defense counsel is not sufficient.

829 F.2d 119 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

See Bench Comment, 1981, No. 3 (FJC): "Excluding the defendant, his [or her] counsel, the public or the press from any portion of the voir dire examination of prospective jurors."

j. Effect of illness of defendant

If a defendant becomes ill and cannot be present when witnesses are questioned, the court must adjourn the trial until the defendant can be present or, if it is a multiple-defendant trial, grant a severance to the ill defendant.

541 F.2d 958 (2d Cir. 1976)

10. Confessions by defendant

Section 3501, Title 18 of the United States Code provides that in any criminal prosecution brought by the United States, any confession of guilt of any criminal offense or any self-incriminating statement, whether oral or in writing, shall be admissible in evidence if it is voluntarily given. Before receiving such a confession or statement in evidence, the trial judge must, out of the presence of the jury, determine if it was voluntarily made. If the trial judge determines that the confession was voluntarily made, it shall be admitted in evidence. The trial judge shall permit the jury to hear relevant evidence on the issue of voluntariness and shall instruct the jury to give such weight to the confession as it feels the confession deserves under all the circumstances.

Section 3501 further provides that in determining the voluntariness of a confession, the trial judge shall take into consideration all the circumstances surrounding the making of the confession, including

1. the time elapsing between arrest and arraignment of the defendant making the confession, if it was made after arrest and before arraignment,
2. whether such defendant knew the nature of the offense with which he was charged or of which he was suspected at the time of making the confession,
3. whether or not such defendant was advised or knew that he was not required to make any statement and that any such statement could be used against him,
4. whether or not such defendant had been advised prior to questioning of his right to the assistance of counsel, and
5. whether or not such defendant was without the assistance of counsel when questioned and when giving such confession.

a. If issue of voluntariness is raised, hearing must be held Under 18 U.S.C. § 3501, if the issue of voluntariness of a confession is raised, the court must conduct a hearing on that issue.

736 F.2d 981 (4th Cir. 1984)

At that hearing the defendant must be permitted to testify as to the voluntariness of the confession outside of the presence of the jury.

780 F.2d 1118 (4th Cir. 1985)

If the issue of voluntariness is never raised, the court is not required sua sponte to hold a voluntariness hearing.

527 F.2d 954 (9th Cir. 1975)

862 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1988)

548 F.2d 1185 (5th Cir. 1977)

871 F.2d 200 (1st Cir. 1989)

638 F.2d 131 (9th Cir. 1981)

If during the course of a trial the trial judge finds that the voluntariness of a confession is clearly in doubt, he or she must conduct an inquiry on that issue despite the failure of defense counsel to offer an objection.

591 F.2d 833 (D.C. Cir. 1978)

625 F.2d 1279 (5th Cir. 1980)

b. Standard to be applied by court

The standard for determining the voluntariness of a confession is whether, taking into consideration all the circumstances, the statement is the product of the accused's free and rational choice. The confession must not have been extracted by any sort of threats or violence, nor obtained by any direct or implied promises, however slight, nor by the exertion of any improper influence.

734 F.2d 770 (11th Cir. 1984)

625 F.2d 541 (5th Cir. 1980)

To find a defendant's confession voluntary, the court must conclude that the defendant made an independent and informed choice of his or her own free will, that the defendant possessed the capability to do so, and that the defendant's will was not overborne by surrounding pressures and circumstances.

623 F.2d 929 (5th Cir. 1980)

The voluntariness of a confession cannot be equated with the absolute absence of intimidation. Under such a test, virtually no statement would be voluntary because few people give incriminating statements in the absence of official action of some kind.

625 F.2d 1128 (4th Cir. 1980)
796 F.2d 598 (3d Cir. 1986)

Statements or confessions made during a time of mental incompetency or insanity are involuntary and inadmissible.

666 F.2d 478 (11th Cir. 1982)

The government is required to prove the voluntariness of a confession only by a preponderance of the evidence.

766 F.2d 1469 (10th Cir. 1985)

To determine the voluntariness of a confession, the court must consider the effect that the totality of the circumstances had on the will of the defendant. The question in each case is whether the defendant's will was overborne when he or she confessed.

796 F.2d 598 (3d Cir. 1986)

Independent of the question of voluntariness, a defendant's case may turn on his or her ability to convince the jury that the manner in which his or her confession was obtained casts doubt on its credibility. Thus, at trial a defendant must be allowed to introduce evidence of the circumstances under which the confession was made, even if the defendant marshaled the same evidence earlier in support of an unsuccessful motion to suppress.

476 U.S. 683 (1986)

c. Burden on prosecution to prove voluntariness of confession

The prosecution bears the burden of persuading the court by at least a preponderance of the evidence that the confession was voluntary.

625 F.2d 541 (5th Cir. 1980)
630 F.2d 232 (4th Cir. 1980)

658 F.2d 1332 (9th Cir. 1981)
727 F.2d 1387 (5th Cir. 1984)

d. Court is not to consider truthfulness of confession

The court is to disregard the question whether the defendant in fact spoke the truth in making a confession. During the hearing, the trial judge is to ignore implications of reliability and to shut his or her mind to any internal evidence of authenticity that a confession might bear.

The only question before the court is whether the confession was given knowingly and voluntarily.

741 F.2d 76 (4th Cir. 1984)
802 F.2d 718 (4th Cir. 1986)

e. Court to make affirmative finding of voluntariness

When an evidentiary hearing has been held on a motion to suppress a confession, the trial court should make a finding on the record as to the voluntariness of the confession.

f. Court to instruct jury

If the issue of the voluntariness of a confession has been placed before the jury, the court must provide a specific instruction on voluntariness to the jury. The court must instruct the jury to give such weight to the confession as the jury feels that it deserves under all the circumstances.

746 F.2d 1098 (6th Cir. 1984)

The trial court is required to instruct the jury concerning the weight to be given a defendant's confession only if sufficient relevant evidence was presented to raise a genuine factual issue concerning the voluntariness of the confession.

545 F.2d 257 (1st Cir. 1976) 689 F.2d 1246 (5th Cir. 1982)
616 F.2d 590 (1st Cir. 1980) 856 F.2d 1037 (8th Cir. 1988)

11. Chain of custody

The defendant may challenge an exhibit offered by the prosecution on the ground that the prosecution has failed to prove a chain of custody of that exhibit. The circuits have held that a prosecutor need not prove an absolute chain of custody but only an adequate chain of custody.

The following are requirements set forth by a number of circuits relative to the meeting of a chain-of-custody objection.

The court must ascertain that the exhibit has not been altered in any material respect since the time of the crime.

585 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1978)

If the defendant has objected to the admission of an exhibit on the ground that the prosecution has failed to establish a valid chain of custody, the court must consider the following factors: the nature of the article, the circumstances surrounding its preservation and custody, and the likelihood that anyone has tampered with it since the time of the crime. After considering such factors, if the trial court is satisfied that the article has not been altered in any important respect, it may deny the chain-of-custody objection and admit the exhibit into evidence.

718 F.2d 1528 (11th Cir. 1983)
774 F.2d 368 (10th Cir. 1985)

787 F.2d 449 (8th Cir. 1986)

Whether the government has proven an adequate chain of custody goes to the weight of the evidence rather than to its admissibility.

627 F.2d 62 (7th Cir. 1980)
664 F.2d 1174 (11th Cir. 1981)

714 F.2d 689 (7th Cir. 1983)

A minor break in the chain of custody affects the weight but not the admissibility of the evidence.

664 F.2d 1174 (11th Cir. 1981)

Courts need to exercise greater care when the issue is the very identity of the evidence rather than possible changes in its condition.

627 F.2d 62 (7th Cir. 1980)

12. Conducting experiments before or involving jury

The decision whether to allow jurors to participate in experiments involving trial evidence, on request of counsel, is in the broad discretion of the trial court.

585 F.2d 314 (8th Cir. 1978) (upholding refusal to allow jurors to look through telescopic lens)

It is not error to permit a handler to demonstrate the ability of a dog to sniff out narcotics.

742 F.2d 1266 (11th Cir. 1984)

B. Witnesses

1. Fifth Amendment

A witness has the privilege under the Fifth Amendment to decline to respond to a question the answer to which would tend to incriminate him or her, that is, would tend to indicate that the witness was guilty of a crime or would furnish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prosecute the witness for a crime.

a. Who may claim privilege

The privilege protects an individual's right to refuse to give information that is compelled, testimonial, and incriminating.

465 U.S. 605 (1984)

861 F.2d 14 (2d Cir. 1988)

The privilege may be asserted in any type of proceeding, administrative or judicial, investigatory or adjudicative.

608 F.2d 1084 (5th Cir. 1979)

655 F.2d 748 (7th Cir. 1981)

615 F.2d 595 (3d Cir. 1980)

855 F.2d 1363 (9th Cir. 1987)

620 F.2d 1086 (5th Cir. 1980)

The privilege protects a federal witness from incrimination under state as well as federal law.

557 F.2d 683 (9th Cir. 1977)

860 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1988)

579 F.2d 1001 (6th Cir. 1978)

The privilege is confined to instances in which the witness has reasonable cause to apprehend a danger of self-incrimination from compelled answers to questions.

541 F.2d 672 (7th Cir. 1976)

862 F.2d 1249 (6th Cir. 1988)

579 F.2d 1001 (6th Cir. 1978)

To assert the privilege, a claimant must be confronted by substantial and real, not merely trifling or imaginary, hazards of incrimination.

812 F.2d 471 (9th Cir. 1987)

A defendant's right against self-incrimination is not violated when he or she is required to give handwriting or voice samples, to don certain clothing, to stand in court, or to provide hair samples.

544 F.2d 242 (6th Cir. 1976)

630 F.2d 804 (5th Cir. 1980)

544 F.2d 353 (9th Cir. 1976)

671 F.2d 690 (2d Cir. 1982)

605 F.2d 910 (5th Cir. 1979)

811 F.2d 384 (7th Cir. 1987)

At the time of trial, the defendant may be compelled to don a mask or a wig or to remove certain clothing to display a scar.

704 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1983)

The defendant may also be required to give voice exemplars by speaking the exact words spoken at the crime.

778 F.2d 570 (10th Cir. 1985)

The defendant may be ordered to shave prior to trial.

722 F.2d 1431 (9th Cir. 1983)

The circuits are split as to whether a defendant may be compelled to write words dictated to him or her. The Ninth Circuit has held that the defendant may be compelled to do so.

544 F.2d 353 (9th Cir. 1976)

The First Circuit has held that the defendant may not be compelled to do so because the defendant is in effect being compelled to testify: "This is the way I spell these words."

732 F.2d 1017 (1st Cir. 1984)

The compelled execution of a consent form directing disclosure of foreign bank records does not violate the Fifth Amendment. The privilege protects only against incrimination by compelled, testimonial communications. The act of executing such a consent form does not involve testimonial compulsion, because it does not by itself relate a factual assertion or disclose information to the government.

465 U.S. 605 (1984)

Fear for the safety of oneself or others is not a ground for refusing to testify.

579 F.2d 1001 (6th Cir. 1978)
648 F.2d 557 (9th Cir. 1980)

652 F.2d 413 (5th Cir. 1981)

Defense counsel may not claim the privilege for a witness. The privilege is a personal one and must be invoked by the witness.

512 F.2d 637 (6th Cir. 1975)
677 F.2d 1027 (4th Cir. 1982)

Fear of prosecution by a foreign state is not a ground for invoking the privilege.

559 F.2d 234 (5th Cir. 1977)
628 F.2d 1260 (9th Cir. 1980)
665 F.2d 521 (5th Cir. 1981)
668 F.2d 432 (8th Cir. 1982)
691 F.2d 116 (2d Cir. 1982) (suggests that privilege may be claimed if there is a real possibility of a foreign prosecution)
699 F.2d 71 (2d Cir. 1983) (privilege may not be invoked unless there is a real and substantial risk of foreign prosecution)
807 F.2d 374 (4th Cir. 1986)

A corporation or other collective entity has no privilege against self-incrimination. Neither a corporation nor its officers may prevent production of relevant corporate records by asserting a corporate privilege against self-incrimination.

Braswell v. United States, 487 U.S. 99, 108 S. Ct. 2284, 101 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1988)
417 U.S. 85 (1974)
515 F.2d 295 (9th Cir. 1975)
626 F.2d 1051 (1st Cir. 1980)
646 F.2d 421 (9th Cir. 1981)
653 F.2d 359 (8th Cir. 1981)
795 F.2d 904 (11th Cir. 1986)

A corporate custodian may not resist a subpoena for corporate records on the ground that the act of producing them has independent testimonial significance that will incriminate him or her individually. Because the custodian acts as a corporate representative, his or her act of production is deemed an act of the corporation, which has no Fifth Amendment privilege.

Braswell v. United States, 487 U.S. 99, 108 S. Ct. 2284, 101 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1988)

However, certain evidentiary consequences flow from the fact that the corporate custodian's act of production is deemed one in his or her representative, rather than individual, capacity. Since the custodian's act of production is deemed an act of the corporation, the government may not make evidentiary use of that act in a proceeding brought against the custodian in his or her individual capacity. For example, in a criminal prosecution against the custodian in his or her individual capacity, the government may not introduce evidence before the jury that the subpoena was served on the custodian-defendant or that the corporate records were delivered by the custodian-defendant. However, the government could make evidentiary use of the corporation's act of production in that proceeding. Thus, the jury would be entitled to infer, from other evidence presented in the case, that if the individual custodian-defendant held a prominent position in the corporation that produced the records, he or she also had possession of the documents or knowledge of their contents.

Braswell v. United States, 487 U.S. 99, 108 S. Ct. 2284, 101 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1988)
See Bench Comment, 1988, No. 5 (FJC): "The Fifth Amendment and Production of Corporate Documents by Custodians and Compelled Consent to Release of Records by Third Parties."

Although the contents of the voluntarily kept business records of a sole proprietorship are not privileged under the Fifth Amendment, the sole proprietor's act of producing or authenticating the records may be privileged.

If a claim of privilege is raised by a sole proprietorship and the court determines that the act of producing the subpoenaed documents involves testimonial self-incrimination, the court must deny enforcement of the subpoena.

465 U.S. 605 (1984)

763 F.2d 165 (3d Cir. 1985)

762 F.2d 632 (8th Cir. 1985)

768 F.2d 343 (1st Cir. 1985)

However, if the records kept by a sole proprietor are required by law or regulation to be kept and fall within the required-records exception to the Fifth Amendment privilege, the sole proprietor may not rely on the Fifth Amendment when the records are required to be produced.

601 F.2d 162 (5th Cir. 1979)

715 F.2d 51 (2d Cir. 1983)

711 F.2d 1187 (2d Cir. 1983)

For records to meet the required-records exception to the Fifth Amendment, the purpose of the government's record-keeping requirement must be essentially regulatory rather than criminal, the records must contain the type of information that a regulated party would ordinarily keep, and the records must have assumed public aspects that render them at least analogous to public documents.

390 U.S. 62 (1968)
781 F.2d 64 (6th Cir. 1986)

The required-records exception does not apply where the purpose of the record-keeping requirement is the detection of criminal activity.

721 F.2d 1072 (7th Cir. 1983)

Several circuits have held that a witness may waive his or her Fifth Amendment privilege before a grand jury, yet claim the privilege at trial. These circuits limit the waiver to the proceeding in which the waiver is made.

604 F.2d 613 (9th Cir. 1979) 685 F.2d 1297 (11th Cir. 1982)
609 F.2d 36 (2d Cir. 1979) 718 F.2d 161 (6th Cir. 1983)

The District of Columbia Circuit has held that waiver of the privilege in one proceeding ordinarily constitutes waiver of the privilege in all subsequent proceedings involving risk of prosecution for the same offense.

416 F.2d 791 (D.C. Cir. 1969)

b. Privilege may not be invoked after incriminating facts have been voluntarily revealed

Once incriminating facts are voluntarily revealed, the privilege may not be invoked to avoid disclosure of details.

582 F.2d 898 (5th Cir. 1978) 682 F.2d 468 (4th Cir. 1982)
587 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1979) 757 F.2d 116 (7th Cir. 1985)

c. Waiver of privilege by testifying defendant

A defendant who takes the stand waives any Fifth Amendment privilege regarding cross-examination relevant to the issues raised by his or her direct testimony.

582 F.2d 898 (5th Cir. 1978)
587 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1979)

757 F.2d 116 (7th Cir. 1985)

The breadth of the waiver is determined by the scope of relevant cross-examination. The extent of the cross-examination is within the discretion of the court. The defendant may not claim the privilege against cross-examination on matters reasonably related to the subject matter of his or her direct examination. Like any other witness, the defendant may have his or her credibility impeached and his or her testimony assailed.

356 U.S. 148 (1958)
563 F.2d 1331 (9th Cir. 1977)

646 F.2d 970 (5th Cir. 1981)
648 F.2d 587 (9th Cir. 1981)

If a defendant testifies on his or her own behalf but refuses to answer relevant questions on cross-examination, the trial court may properly advise the jury that it may consider the defendant's refusal in assessing his or her credibility, or alternatively, the court may strike the defendant's testimony in whole or in part.

546 F.2d 1242 (5th Cir. 1977)

612 F.2d 432 (9th Cir. 1979) (court's discretion must be guided by reason and fairness. Before striking testimony, court should warn defendant that defendant's testimony will be stricken if he or she persistently refuses to answer proper questions on cross-examination.)

611 F.2d 78 (5th Cir. 1980)

If the defendant has testified, the government may comment on the defendant's refusal to answer proper questions during closing argument.

582 F.2d 898 (5th Cir. 1978)
612 F.2d 432 (9th Cir. 1979)

611 F.2d 78 (5th Cir. 1980)

d. Prosecution witness may invoke privilege on cross-examination

A prosecution witness may invoke the privilege even though the question asked the witness on cross-examination is a proper one.

587 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1979)

If a prosecution witness's claim of privilege is sustained, the court may strike the witness's testimony in whole or in part.

384 F.2d 624 (5th Cir. 1967)
603 F.2d 535 (5th Cir. 1979)

648 F.2d 557 (9th Cir. 1980)
837 F.2d 653 (4th Cir. 1988)

If a prosecution witness claims the privilege when questioned on collateral or cumulative matters by defense counsel, his or her testimony on direct examination need not be stricken.

544 F.2d 642 (2d Cir. 1976)
549 F.2d 1088 (6th Cir. 1977)

603 F.2d 535 (5th Cir. 1979)

If a prosecution witness gives damaging testimony on direct examination but severely limits cross-examination by claiming the privilege, the defendant may be entitled to a mistrial.

545 F.2d 1029 (5th Cir. 1977)

If a witness fails to invoke the privilege in response to a question on which he or she could have claimed it, the witness is deemed to have waived the privilege as to all questions on the same subject matter.

598 F.2d 313 (2d Cir. 1979)

e. Procedure to be followed when a witness claims privilege

The trial judge must make a determination based not only on the witness's assertion but also on all the other circumstances of the case whether the witness has reasonable cause to believe an answer to a question would support a conviction of the witness or would furnish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prove a crime by the witness.

559 F.2d 189 (2d Cir. 1977)

Out of the presence of the jury, the trial judge should examine the witness on the record regarding his or her claim of privilege. The witness is permitted to state in very general, circumstantial terms why he or she feels it may be incriminating to answer a given question. The judge may then examine the witness as long as is necessary to determine whether there are reasonable grounds to believe that being compelled to answer the question will subject the witness to a danger of incrimination.

536 F.2d 1042 (5th Cir. 1976)
546 F.2d 1378 (10th Cir. 1976)

Some circuits have approved the further exploration of the witness's claim by the judge in an in camera hearing at which only the witness, his or her counsel, and a reporter are present.

589 F.2d 24 (1st Cir. 1978)
684 F.2d 1126 (5th Cir. 1982)

The judge must be sensitive to the fact that the witness frequently cannot prove that his or her claim is legitimate without surrendering it.

568 F.2d 531 (7th Cir. 1977)

The guarantee against testimonial compulsion must be liberally construed. The court, rather than the witness, is to decide whether there is reasonable cause to apprehend danger from an answer, but the court is to require the witness to answer only if it clearly appears to the court that the witness is mistaken in his or her apprehension.

341 U.S. 479 (1951)
562 F.2d 334 (5th Cir. 1977)

Sustaining the privilege requires only that it be evident from the implication of the question, in the setting in which it is asked, that a responsive answer to the question or explanation of why it cannot be answered might be dangerous because an injurious disclosure could result.

536 F.2d 1042 (5th Cir. 1976) 734 F.2d 913 (2d Cir. 1984)
557 F.2d 683 (9th Cir. 1977)

Once a prima facie claim of privilege is raised, it is the burden of the government to make it "perfectly clear" that the answers sought "cannot possibly" tend to incriminate, for, if the witness were required to prove the hazard, he or she would be compelled to surrender the very protection that the privilege is designed to guarantee.

580 F.2d 1212 (3d Cir. 1978)
603 F.2d 469 (3d Cir. 1979)

A witness may not assert a blanket claim of privilege. The claim must be asserted question by question.

615 F.2d 595 (3d Cir. 1980) 646 F.2d 365 (9th Cir. 1981)
622 F.2d 53 (3d Cir. 1980) 706 F.2d 31 (2d Cir. 1983)
625 F.2d 693 (5th Cir. 1980) 862 F.2d 1249 (6th Cir. 1988)

The court should conduct a hearing out of the jury's presence to determine which questions the witness must answer and which need not be answered.

625 F.2d 693 (5th Cir. 1980)
646 F.2d 48 (2d Cir. 1981)

The court may sustain a blanket assertion of the privilege if it concludes, after inquiry, that the witness could legitimately refuse to answer essentially all relevant questions.

646 F.2d 365 (9th Cir. 1981)

When a non-party government witness invokes the Fifth Amendment on cross-examination, the court should permit the assertion of the privilege in the presence of the jury in order to allow the jury to draw adverse inferences from his or her silence.

648 F.2d 557 (9th Cir. 1980)
832 F.2d 676 (1st Cir. 1987)

The criterion to be applied by the trial court in determining whether the Fifth Amendment has been properly invoked is the possibility of prosecution of the witness rather than the likelihood of prosecution. In other words, the court is not to try to determine whether it is likely or not likely that the witness will be prosecuted but rather whether it is possible that the witness will be prosecuted.

253 F.2d 135 (2d Cir. 1958)	507 F.2d 292 (9th Cir. 1974)
256 F.2d 654 (8th Cir. 1958)	609 F.2d 867 (7th Cir. 1979)
472 F.2d 607 (6th Cir. 1973)	661 F.2d 1145 (7th Cir. 1981)
488 F.2d 1206 (1st Cir. 1973)

f. Court should be alert to any indication that witness wishes to invoke privilege

The privilege may be exercised in a variety of ways: the witness may refuse to answer the question, ask the court or the attorney if he or she has to answer, mention the Fifth Amendment, or simply remain silent. Whenever the court concludes that the witness may be attempting to invoke the privilege, the court should ask the witness whether he or she desires to claim the privilege or wants to consult an attorney. The court may adjourn the trial in order to give the witness time to consult an attorney.

450 F.2d 1131 (5th Cir. 1971)
571 F.2d 941 (5th Cir. 1978)

Although there is no duty to advise a witness of his or her right not to incriminate himself or herself, it is entirely proper for the court to do so.

535 F.2d 223 (3d Cir. 1976)
732 F.2d 1338 (7th Cir. 1984)

The court should not, however, assume that the witness will claim the privilege. The witness must claim it.

571 F.2d 941 (5th Cir. 1978)

g. Witness not to be called if it is known he or she will claim privilege

Neither the prosecution nor the defense should be permitted to call a witness who it is known will claim the privilege.

545 F.2d 1029 (5th Cir. 1977) 707 F.2d 447 (10th Cir. 1983)
591 F.2d 1058 (5th Cir. 1979)

A defendant may not call as a witness a codefendant who has indicated his or her intention to claim the privilege.

503 F.2d 598 (9th Cir. 1974)
546 F.2d 1264 (5th Cir. 1977)

h. Effect of grant of immunity

A witness who has been immunized may not claim the privilege, since the immunity affords him or her the same protection as the Fifth Amendment.

699 F.2d 71 (2d Cir. 1983)
860 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1988)

i. Defendant may or may not be able to claim privilege after pleading guilty

A defendant who pleads guilty to one count of a multicount indictment may claim the privilege because he or she is still subject to prosecution on the other counts.

503 F.2d 591 (10th Cir. 1974)
656 F.2d 412 (9th Cir. 1981)

If there is only one crime for which the defendant is potentially liable, and the defendant pleads guilty to that crime, the plea is a waiver of the privilege, and he or she may be compelled to testify.

580 F.2d 1212 (3d Cir. 1978)

668 F.2d 1238 (D.C. Cir. 1981)

636 F.2d 535 (D.C. Cir. 1980)

If the defendant pleads guilty to a federal charge but is still subject to prosecution by a state, he or she may claim the privilege.

608 F.2d 147 (5th Cir. 1979)

A voluntary guilty plea is a waiver of the privilege only with respect to the crime that was admitted to by the plea.

682 F.2d 853 (9th Cir. 1982)

706 F.2d 31 (2d Cir. 1983)

685 F.2d 1297 (11th Cir. 1982)

j. Comment in argument after assertion of privilege

The jury may draw no inference from the exercise of the privilege irrespective of whether the inference is favorable to the prosecution or to the defense.

668 F.2d 1116 (10th Cir. 1981)

If the witness makes a valid claim of privilege, counsel may not make any argument to the jury based on any inference that might be drawn from that claim.

615 F.2d 878 (9th Cir. 1980)

735 F.2d 395 (11th Cir. 1984)

If the defendant takes the witness stand, the prosecutor may comment on the defendant's failure to deny or explain incriminating facts already in evidence. The prosecutor may do so whether or not the defendant claims the privilege. The defendant may not selectively testify as to the merits yet avoid comment on his or her failure to explain other incriminating evidence.

2. Introducing information adverse to government witness during direct examination

The government may bring out on its direct examination of a government witness the fact that it has entered into an agreement with that witness to permit his or her pleading to a reduced charge.

630 F.2d 1184 (7th Cir. 1980)
736 F.2d 1222 (8th Cir. 1984)

717 F.2d 135 (4th Cir. 1983)
871 F.2d 1298 (6th Cir. 1989)

The government may bring out on direct examination of a government witness the circumstances surrounding that witness's motivation for cooperating with the government or any other matter damaging to that witness's credibility. The admission of such evidence during direct examination is permitted to avoid the inference by the jury that the government is attempting to keep from them the witness's possible bias.

631 F.2d 1049 (2d Cir. 1980)

There is a split among the circuits regarding the extent to which the government is free to elicit the details of its plea arrangements with its witnesses on direct examination. The Second and Ninth Circuits do not permit the government to elicit the terms of a cooperation agreement relating to the witness's promise to testify truthfully before the witness's credibility is attacked on cross-examination.

618 F.2d 530 (9th Cir. 1980)
631 F.2d 1049 (2d Cir. 1980)

The Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits allow the government to elicit a witness's plea bargain or immunity agreement promise to testify truthfully on direct examination, unless the testimony would suggest that the government possesses special knowledge of the witness's veracity.

630 F.2d 1184 (7th Cir. 1980)
717 F.2d 135 (4th Cir. 1983)

719 F.2d 375 (11th Cir. 1983)
871 F.2d 1298 (6th Cir. 1989)

Although the government may bring out on direct examination that a government witness is within a witness protection program, this must be handled so as not to imply that the defendant was the reason the witness entered the program.

604 F.2d 769 (2d Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 449 U.S. 117, 66 L. Ed. 2d 328, 101 S. Ct. 426 (1980)

It is probably better to have the witness protection program brought out only by the defendant.

552 F.2d 621 (5th Cir. 1977)

3. Cross-examination of government witness

The Sixth Amendment right of an accused to confront the witnesses against him or her includes the opportunity for adequate and effective cross-examination.

415 U.S. 308 (1974)

474 U.S. 15 (1985)

United States v. Owens, 484 U.S. 554, 108 S. Ct. 838, 98 L. Ed. 2d 951 (1988)

Iden v. Kentucky, 109 S. Ct. 480, 102 L. Ed. 2d 513 (1988)

The right of a defendant to engage in a searching and wide-ranging cross-examination of any government witness is an essential requirement for a fair trial.

557 F.2d 1237 (8th Cir. 1977)

Cross-examination may embrace any matter germane to direct examination, qualifying or destroying it, or attempting to elucidate, modify, explain, contradict, or rebut testimony given by the witness on direct examination.

707 F.2d 1007 (8th Cir. 1983)

872 F.2d 163 (6th Cir. 1989)

The authority of the court to limit cross-examination comes into play only after the defendant has been permitted to exercise sufficient cross-examination to satisfy the Sixth Amendment.

665 F.2d 1005 (11th Cir. 1982)

706 F.2d 1549 (11th Cir. 1983)

Exposure of a witness's bias or motivation in testifying is a proper and important function of cross-examination. The Confrontation Clause is violated when an accused is prohibited from engaging in otherwise appropriate cross-examination designed to demonstrate the bias or motivation of a witness.

415 U.S. 308 (1974)

475 U.S. 673 (1986)

Cross-examination into any motivation or incentive that a government witness may have for falsifying testimony is to be given the widest possible scope, particularly with respect to the testimony of those who have a substantial reason for being cooperative with government.

653 F.2d 1002 (5th Cir. 1981)

856 F.2d 430 (1st Cir. 1988)

When a cooperating witness who has entered into a plea agreement testifies for the government against a codefendant, effective cross-examination requires that the codefendant be permitted to inquire into the specific terms of the plea agreement. This includes questioning designed to demonstrate the specific crime to which the cooperating witness pled guilty, the range of punishment the witness is exposed to under the guilty plea, and the potential sentence the witness was exposed to before entering into the plea agreement.

867 F.2d 426 (8th Cir. 1989)

Even when there is no formal plea or "deal" between federal prosecutors and a witness testifying on behalf of the government, the defendant is permitted to cross-examine the witness regarding any hopes the witness may entertain for government leniency on charges pending against him or her.

870 F.2d 880 (2d Cir. 1989)

The trial court has the duty to control cross-examination of government witnesses to prevent it from unduly burdening the record with cumulative or irrelevant material. The court may limit cross-examination to exclude repetitive questioning or to avoid extensive and time-wasting exploration of collateral matters.

578 F.2d 757 (9th Cir. 1978)

4. Interviewing of government witnesses by defense counsel

As a general rule, a witness belongs neither to the government nor to the defense.

a. Both sides may interview

Both sides have the right to interview witnesses before trial.

369 F.2d 185 (D.C. Cir. 1966)
587 F.2d 81 (1st Cir. 1978)

608 F.2d 1175 (9th Cir. 1979)

No provision for disclosing names and addresses of government witnesses is included in Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 16. However, as part of its inherent power to ensure the proper and orderly administration of justice, the court may require the government to provide the defendant with a list of witnesses.

834 F.2d 1311 (7th Cir. 1987)

The Fifth Circuit has stated that addresses of government witnesses must ordinarily be disclosed to the defense.

589 F.2d 799 (5th Cir. 1979)

If a witness is in protective custody or if for any reason a witness may be subject to personal danger, it is the duty of the trial court to ensure that counsel for the defense has access to the witness under controlled arrangements. A better procedure is to allow defense counsel to hear directly from the witness whether the witness would be willing to talk to him or her, either alone or in the presence of the witness's own attorney. The court may delay access to a witness in protective custody until shortly before trial when such delay is warranted by the circumstances.

602 F.2d 1176 (4th Cir. 1979)

b. Witness may refuse to be interviewed by defense counsel

It is imperative that prosecutors and other government officials maintain a posture of strict neutrality when advising witnesses of their rights and duties with respect to talking to defense counsel.

580 F.2d 929 (9th Cir. 1978)

A defendant's rights are not violated when a government witness chooses not to be interviewed.

550 F.2d 1364 (5th Cir. 1977)
728 F.2d 1038 (8th Cir. 1984)

A government witness may dictate the circumstances under which he or she will submit to an interview by defense counsel.

555 F.2d 407 (5th Cir. 1977)

A government witness may choose to be interviewed by defense counsel only in the presence of a government attorney.

633 F.2d 972 (1st Cir. 1980)

The government has no duty to present its witnesses for interviews. Its duty is simply not to deny access.

747 F.2d 632 (11th Cir. 1984)

If a witness declines to be interviewed, defense counsel may not inquire on cross-examination as to why the witness exercised that right.

545 F.2d 389 (4th Cir. 1976)

c. Government may not discourage interviewing of witnesses by defendant

The government may not deny a defendant access to a witness by hiding the witness.

571 F.2d 309 (5th Cir. 1978)

652 F.2d 591 (5th Cir. 1981)

The government's deliberate concealment of a named eyewitness whose testimony would admittedly be material constitutes a prima facie deprivation of due process.

571 F.2d 309 (5th Cir. 1978)

If defense counsel establishes inability to learn the whereabouts or identity of eyewitnesses through normal investigative techniques, the trial court may order the disclosure of the names and addresses of the witnesses by the government.

637 F.2d 625 (9th Cir. 1980)

The prosecution may interfere with a defendant's right of access to a government witness only under the clearest and most compelling circumstances.

587 F.2d 81 (1st Cir. 1978)

608 F.2d 1175 (9th Cir. 1979)

When the free choice of a potential witness to talk to defense counsel is constrained by the prosecution without justification, the constraint improperly interferes with the defendant's right of access to witnesses.

369 F.2d 185 (D.C. Cir. 1966)
669 F.2d 6 (1st Cir. 1981)

It is not improper for a government representative to advise a government witness of his or her right to decline to be interviewed by defense counsel.

728 F.2d 1038 (8th Cir. 1984)

A witness may of his or her own free will refuse to be interviewed by either the prosecution or the defense.

669 F.2d 6 (1st Cir. 1981)

d. Government may request a temporary restraining order to prevent harassment of witnesses

Section 1514, Title 18 of the United States Code permits the court to issue a temporary restraining order prohibiting the harassment of a victim or witness in a federal criminal case if the government files an appropriate application and the court concludes there is a reasonable basis for believing such harassment exists.

872 F.2d 957 (10th Cir. 1989)

5. Exclusion of witnesses from courtroom

Federal Rule of Evidence 615 mandates that witnesses be excluded from the courtroom at the request of any party.

625 F.2d 472 (3d Cir. 1980)

Ordinarily, when Rule 615 is invoked, the government is permitted to have one case agent in the courtroom during trial.

791 F.2d 331 (4th Cir. 1986)
870 F.2d 164 (5th Cir. 1989)

The federal agent in charge of the preparation of a criminal case for trial may not be excluded from the courtroom even though that agent is to be a government witness. Any prejudice from the presence of that witness while others are testifying can be prevented by requiring the government to present the testimony of that agent at an early stage of its case.

584 F.2d 666 (5th Cir. 1978)

733 F.2d 327 (4th Cir. 1984)

It is reversible error to refuse a timely Rule 615 request to permit only one of two federal agents to remain in the courtroom during trial if the result is that the second agent hears the testimony of the first agent before testifying himself or herself.

791 F.2d 331 (4th Cir. 1986)

If a witness violates the court's exclusion order, it is within the discretion of the court to prohibit that witness from testifying.

510 F.2d 861 (7th Cir. 1975)

674 F.2d 1382 (11th Cir. 1982)

When a witness fails to obey the court's exclusion order, the court may exclude the testimony of that witness entirely or may permit that witness to testify only as to matters about which he or she has not heard the testimony of other witnesses.

531 F.2d 936 (8th Cir. 1976)

It is a violation of the rule of exclusion of witnesses for counsel to take notes of the testimony of witnesses and then relay the substance of those notes to other witnesses.

711 F.2d 86 (8th Cir. 1983)

6. Defense counsel conferring with testifying defendant during recess

It is reversible error for a court to direct a defendant not to consult with his or her attorney during an overnight recess that is called between the defendant's direct examination and cross-examination. Reversal is required under such circumstances without inquiry into the question of prejudice. Such an order violates the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel, which includes the right to discuss a variety of trial-related matters with counsel during a lengthy recess in trial.

Geders v. United States, 425 U.S. 90 (1976)

However, the court has discretion to order a defendant not to consult with counsel during a brief recess between the defendant's direct examination and cross-examination. The defendant has no right to discuss his or her testimony with counsel while it is still in progress, and nothing but the ongoing testimony is likely to be discussed in a brief recess between direct examination and cross-examination. The order condemned in Geders was of a different character because the normal conversations between attorney and client that occur during overnight recesses encompass matters beyond the content of a defendant's own testimony.

Perry v. Leeke, 109 S. Ct. 594, 102 L. Ed. 2d 624 (1989)

C. Other Issues

1. Stipulation of facts

Generally, the government is not bound by a defendant's offer to stipulate to an element of a crime. The government is free to present to the jury evidence to establish a complete picture of the events constituting the charged crime.

793 F.2d 942 (8th Cir. 1986)

The government is required to stipulate to facts that witnesses would otherwise testify to only if the prejudicial aspects of their testimony outweigh its probative value.

638 F.2d 1048 (7th Cir. 1981)

Before accepting a stipulation of fact from a defendant in a criminal prosecution, the trial judge must make sure that the stipulation is knowingly and voluntarily made by the defendant.

588 F.2d 1256 (9th Cir. 1978)

The trial judge must address the defendant and ensure that the stipulation is being so made.

588 F.2d 1256 (9th Cir. 1978)

A stipulation that an identified witness would testify in a certain way is not a stipulation as to the truth of that testimony. It is error for the court to treat such a stipulation as a stipulation that a certain element or elements of the crime have been proven. The stipulation is in fact only a stipulation that the witness would, if called as a witness, so testify.

560 F.2d 1235 (5th Cir. 1977)

2. Role of judge in trial

A judge has broad discretion in supervising trials, and his or her behavior during trial justifies reversal only if it abuses that discretion.

856 F.2d 414 (1st Cir. 1988)

857 F.2d 529 (9th Cir. 1988)

Judges have wide discretion with respect to the tone and tempo of proceedings before them. They are not mere moderators nor hosts at a symposium.

741 F.2d 744 (5th Cir. 1984)

A trial judge has the privilege, and at times the duty, to elicit facts he or she deems necessary to the clear presentation of the issues. To this end the judge may examine witnesses who testify, provided that the judge preserves an attitude of impartiality and guards against giving the jury an impression that he or she believes the defendant to be guilty.

602 F.2d 1248 (7th Cir. 1979)

739 F.2d 1322 (8th Cir. 1984)

The trial judge is well-advised to refrain from any challenging questioning of a defendant, and especially to refrain from propounding any question that indicates the judge's disbelief in the essence of the defense.

727 F.2d 222 (2d Cir. 1984)

A trial judge may interrogate a witness to clarify his or her testimony or to ensure that a case is fairly tried. However, when the attorneys are competently conducting their cases, it is improper for the trial judge to question the witnesses. By doing so, the judge places the opposing counsel in a disadvantageous position. The attorney may hesitate to object to the judge's examination for fear of creating, or giving the appearance of creating, a conflict with the judge.

601 F.2d 203 (5th Cir. 1979), rev'd on other grounds, 700 F.2d 953 (5th Cir. 1983)

In a complex trial, intervention by the judge is often needed to clarify what is going on. If the facts are becoming muddled and neither side is succeeding in attempts to clarify them, the judge performs an important duty by interposing clarifying comments or questions.

592 F.2d 931 (6th Cir. 1979)

857 F.2d 529 (9th Cir. 1988)

The trial judge has considerable discretion to interrupt and ask impartial questions to clarify misunderstandings or otherwise ensure that the trial proceeds efficiently and fairly.

573 F.2d 681 (1st Cir. 1978)

3. Comment on evidence by court

In instructing the jury, a trial judge may comment on the evidence. The judge must do so with great care, however, so as not to unduly prejudice the thinking of the jury.

740 F.2d 1352 (6th Cir. 1984)

A judge may, whenever necessary, assist the jury in arriving at a just conclusion by explaining and commenting on the evidence. However, the judge must make it clear to the jury that all matters of fact are submitted for their determination.

747 F.2d 930 (5th Cir. 1984)

In commenting on evidence, the trial judge need not refer to all of it, but the court should ensure that the facts are accurately discussed and that, if the evidence is summarized, both sides are analyzed. The judge's comments should be balanced and not slanted toward conviction. A trial judge is permitted to express opinions on the interplay of the evidence as long as the judge stays within the judge's role in the fact-finding process and explains to the jury that he or she is only assisting them as the ultimate triers of fact. The fundamental principle circumscribing a trial judge's power to comment on the evidence is that the comment must serve to instruct and assist the jury in understanding the facts and issues in dispute.

707 F.2d 85 (4th Cir. 1983)

In a criminal case a plea of not guilty places every issue in doubt, and not even undisputed facts may be removed from the jury's consideration, either by direction or by omission in the charge. A trial judge may not step in and direct a finding of contested fact in favor of the prosecution regardless of how overwhelmingly the evidence may point in that direction. The trial judge is barred from attempting to override or interfere with the jurors' independent judgment in a manner contrary to the interests of the accused.

814 F.2d 783 (1st Cir. 1987)

840 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1988)

When the court grants a defendant's motion for a judgment of acquittal in a codefendant case, the better practice is to simply acknowledge the acquitted defendant's absence and to instruct the jury that it should not affect their deliberations as to the remaining defendants. It is not necessary to inform the jury that the codefendant's case was dismissed because the government introduced insufficient evidence upon which to base a conviction. The jury may infer from such a comment that the court believes there is sufficient evidence to convict the remaining defendants.

871 F.2d 957 (11th Cir. 1989)

4. Permitting reopening after resting

It is within the discretion of the trial court to permit a party to reopen its case after resting.

614 F.2d 726 (10th Cir. 1980)

861 F.2d 350 (2d Cir. 1988)

The government may be permitted to reopen its case even after the defendant has moved for acquittal at the close of the government's case.

533 F.2d 391 (8th Cir. 1976)

A court should, however, be reluctant to permit reopening of a case after a party rests.

583 F.2d 899 (6th Cir. 1978)

In passing on a motion to reopen, the court should consider the timeliness of the motion, the character of the additional testimony, and the effect of granting the motion. The party moving to reopen must provide a reasonable explanation for failure to present the additional evidence during its case in chief.

596 F.2d 759 (8th Cir. 1979)

772 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1985)

The evidence proffered on a motion to reopen should be relevant, admissible, technically adequate, and helpful to the jury in ascertaining guilt or innocence. The belated receipt of such evidence should not imbue it with distorted importance, prejudice the opposing party's case, or preclude opposing counsel from having an adequate opportunity to meet the additional evidence.

772 F.2d 1172 (5th Cir. 1985)

5. Bench conferences

Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 43(c) provides that a defendant need not be present at a conference or argument on a question of law, and need not sign a written waiver of his or her presence.

509 F.2d 745 (9th Cir. 1975)

735 F.2d 1236 (11th Cir. 1984)

631 F.2d 583 (8th Cir. 1980)

The decision whether to conduct bench conferences, or side-bar discussions, is a matter within the trial court's discretion.

857 F.2d 529 (9th Cir. 1988)

All bench conferences must be fully reported. It is error not to have the court reporter record bench conferences.

527 F.2d 590 (4th Cir. 1975)

The Fifth Circuit has suggested that when a bench conference is held the jury be excluded from the courtroom or the conference be held in chambers so that it can be completely reported.

560 F.2d 1268 (5th Cir. 1977)

See Bench Comment, 1986, No. 4 (FJC): "Limitations on a defendant's right under Rule 43 to be present at every stage of trial."

Part VI. Argument

A. Opening Statement

1. By the prosecutor

The purpose of the government's opening statement is to give the jury the broad outlines of its case so that the jury can better understand it. The prosecutor should not depart from that purpose by including over-dramatic, unsavory characterizations that serve to poison the jury's mind against the defendant.

409 F.2d 102 (3d Cir. 1969)

496 F.2d 723 (3d Cir. 1974)

It is improper for a prosecutor to make remarks in an opening statement that communicate his or her own personal evaluation of the case to the jury.

548 F.2d 840 (9th Cir. 1977)

2. By defense counsel

It is error for the trial court to deny defense counsel the right to make an opening statement unless the defense indicates its intention to call witnesses. Defense counsel has the right to make an opening statement even if counsel intends not to call any witnesses but instead to make the defendant's case through cross-examination of government witnesses. The function of the defense's opening statement is to enable defense counsel to inform the court and jury what the defense expects to prove. The importance of this function is not diminished by the fact that defense counsel expects to prove the defense's theory through cross-examination of government witnesses.

521 F.2d 1122 (9th Cir. 1975)

680 F.2d 847 (1st Cir. 1982)

The timing of defense counsel's opening statement is within the trial court's discretion. The trial court may require the opening statement of defense counsel to be given immediately following the opening statement of government counsel or may permit defense counsel to give an opening statement after all government evidence has been received.

778 F.2d 591 (10th Cir. 1985)

B. Final Argument

1. Right to final argument

Denial of the defendant's opportunity for final argument abridges the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to present a defense no matter how strong the case for the prosecution may appear to the court.

603 F.2d 587 (6th Cir. 1979)

2. Control by court

The trial court may exercise broad discretion in controlling closing arguments and in ensuring that arguments do not stray unduly from the mark.

731 F.2d 440 (7th Cir. 1984)

3. Time limitations

So long as the defendant has an opportunity to make all legally tenable arguments that are supported by the facts of the case, the trial court may limit the length of final arguments.

690 F.2d 349 (11th Cir. 1982)

728 F.2d 1043 (8th Cir. 1984)

4. Prosecutor's comment on defendant's failure to testify

a. Direct reference to defendant's failure to testify

A prosecutor's direct reference to a defendant's failure to testify violates the defendant's privilege against compelled self-incrimination.

380 U.S. 609 (1965)

However, the Supreme Court ruled that a prosecutor's comment that "[the defendant] could have taken the stand and explained it to you, anything he wanted to" did not violate the Fifth Amendment because it was a fair response to an argument initiated by defense counsel to the effect that counsel's non-testifying client had not been given a chance to explain his side of the story.

United States v. Robinson, 485 U.S. 25, 108 S. Ct. 864, 99 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1988)

b. Indirect reference to defendant's failure to testify

The prosecuting attorney must strictly observe the obligation to avoid any adverse comment to the jury on the defendant's failure to testify. The test is whether, in the circumstances of the case, the language used was manifestly intended to be a comment on the failure of the accused to testify or was of such character that the jury would naturally and necessarily take it to be so.

521 F.2d 950 (D.C. Cir. 1975)

862 F.2d 630 (7th Cir. 1988)

612 F.2d 972 (5th Cir. 1980)

866 F.2d 1071 (9th Cir. 1988)

A prosecutor's closing argument improperly emphasizes the defendant's failure to testify when the prosecutor argues that critical facts in the case have not been controverted and those facts could not have been controverted by anyone other than the defendant.

653 F.2d 1359 (10th Cir. 1981)

861 F.2d 972 (6th Cir. 1988)

Oblique comments on a defendant's failure to testify, if sufficiently suggestive, are as unlawful as direct comments.

546 F.2d 166 (5th Cir. 1977)

In closing argument, the prosecutor may refer to government evidence as uncontradicted if witnesses other than the defendant could have contradicted the evidence. It is impermissible to state that the evidence was uncontradicted if the defendant was the only person who could have contradicted the evidence.

602 F.2d 1201 (5th Cir. 1979)

706 F.2d 161 (6th Cir. 1983)

653 F.2d 1359 (10th Cir. 1981)

826 F.2d 654 (7th Cir. 1987)

5. Prosecutor's comment on defendant's failure to present exculpatory evidence

The prosecutor may properly call the jury's attention to the defendant's failure to present alibi witnesses in support of his or her alibi defense.

539 F.2d 17 (9th Cir. 1976)

The prosecutor may comment on a defendant's failure to explain evidence against him or her after the defendant has waived the privilege by taking the witness stand.

242 U.S. 470 (1917)

The prosecutor may properly comment on the defendant's failure to present exculpatory evidence as long as the prosecutor does not call attention to the defendant's failure to testify.

684 F.2d 1329 (9th Cir. 1982)

760 F.2d 884 (8th Cir. 1985)

730 F.2d 1292 (9th Cir. 1984)

868 F.2d 1097 (9th Cir. 1989)

A distinction exists between a comment by the prosecutor concerning failure of the "defense" to counter or explain evidence and failure of the "defendant" to do so. A comment about the former does not violate a defendant's Fifth Amendment rights.

652 F.2d 551 (5th Cir. 1981)

866 F.2d 1071 (9th Cir. 1988)

6. Improper arguments by government

It is improper for a prosecutor to appeal to the emotions of the jurors during closing argument.

864 F.2d 241 (1st Cir. 1989)

It is improper for the prosecutor to assert his or her personal belief in the truth or falsity of any testimony or the guilt of any defendant. Such expressions are a form of unsworn, unchecked testimony.

576 F.2d 1028 (3d Cir. 1978)

859 F.2d 1067 (2d Cir. 1988)

593 F.2d 749 (6th Cir. 1979)

It is improper for a prosecutor to express his or her personal opinion that a defendant has lied on the stand. However, if there is uncontro-verted evidence that a testifying defendant has previously lied about a relevant matter, the prosecutor may fairly characterize such testimony as a lie.

865 F.2d 191 (9th Cir. 1988)

It is improper for a prosecutor to argue that in order to acquit the defendant, the jury must find that the government's witnesses lied to them. This argument is incorrect because it ignores the possibility that the jury may return a verdict of not guilty because it finds the evidence insufficient to convict the defendant by proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

583 F.2d 380 (7th Cir. 1978)

869 F.2d 316 (7th Cir. 1989)

A prosecutor's "golden rule" argument, which asks jurors to put themselves in the defendant's shoes, and ask themselves what they would have done in that situation, is improper. This argument encourages the jury to depart from neutrality and decide the case on the basis of personal involvement or bias, rather than on the evidence.

869 F.2d 316 (7th Cir. 1989)

It is error for the prosecutor to comment on the conduct of the defendant during the trial. Unless the defendant takes the stand, the defendant's personal appearance or conduct at the trial is irrelevant to the question of guilt or innocence. If the defendant remains impassive during the testimony of his or her accuser, the defendant is only conforming to the standard of deportment that courts have a right to expect from all participants in the trial process.

655 F.2d 98 (6th Cir. 1981)

A prosecutor who comments on the courtroom conduct of a defendant who has not testified and states to the jury that it may consider that conduct as evidence of guilt violates the defendant's right to a fair trial.

678 F.2d 1208 (4th Cir. 1982)

746 F.2d 787 (11th Cir. 1984)

The prosecution may not imply that the government would not have brought the case unless the defendant were guilty. It may not attempt to invoke the sanction of its office or of the government itself as a basis for conviction.

664 F.2d 971 (5th Cir. 1981)

It is reversible error for the prosecutor to state that the case would not have been presented had the United States not believed that the defendant was guilty.

593 F.2d 749 (6th Cir. 1979)

It is reversible error for the prosecution to argue that the jury should find the defendant guilty because an earlier jury found a coconspirator guilty of the same offenses on substantially less evidence.

593 F.2d 590 (5th Cir. 1979)

Neither the prosecution nor the defense may say anything to the jury implying that evidence supporting its position exists but has not been introduced in the trial.

568 F.2d 396 (5th Cir. 1978)

It is error for a prosecutor to suggest to the jurors that they would be "violating [their] sacred oath before God" if they turned the defendant loose.

566 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1978)

The prosecutor is prohibited from making race-conscious or racially biased arguments.

481 U.S. 279, 309 n.30 (1987)

865 F.2d 925 (7th Cir. 1989) (reference to "Cuban drug dealers" improper)

It is improper for a prosecutor to argue that the testimony of an undercover black police officer should be believed because the defendant is black and it is unreasonable to believe that a black police officer would give false testimony against a black defendant.

611 F.2d 414 (2d Cir. 1979)

7. Arguments must be from the record

Closing arguments of both prosecutor and defense counsel must be derived from the record of the trial.

636 F.2d 117 (5th Cir. 1981)

660 F.2d 547 (5th Cir. 1981)

The prosecutor is free to draw any reasonable inferences from the evidence adduced at trial.

859 F.2d 461 (7th Cir. 1988)

It is improper to draw inferences that are so unreasonable as to be more akin to the presentation of new evidence to the jury.

863 F.2d 474 (7th Cir. 1988)

8. Duty of court to intervene in improper argument

When an improper closing argument is being made by the prosecution, the trial judge has an obligation to intervene at once to ensure protection of the defendant's right to a fair trial.

551 F.2d 1386 (5th Cir. 1977)

608 F.2d 659 (5th Cir. 1979)

If a prosecuting attorney improperly refers to the failure of the defendant to take the stand, the trial judge should immediately admonish the jury that the law does not compel the defendant to testify and that the jurors are to draw no inference of guilt by reason of the defendant's failure to take the witness stand.

578 F.2d 187 (7th Cir. 1978)

9. Comment on failure of codefendant to testify

Comments by a defendant that implicitly or explicitly ask the jury to infer the guilt of a codefendant who has not testified are improper.

308 F.2d 140 (5th Cir. 1962)

734 F.2d 484 (10th Cir. 1984)

486 F.2d 1351 (9th Cir. 1973)

863 F.2d 1522 (11th Cir. 1989)

C. Vouching for Witness

It is improper for the prosecution to vouch for the credibility of a government witness. To vouch for a government witness is to reassure the jury that the witness's testimony may be accepted as being true.

Vouching for a witness has occurred if the jury could reasonably believe that the prosecutor was indicating personal belief in that witness's credibility. It is improper for the prosecutor to place the prestige of the government behind a witness by making personal assurances of the veracity of that witness.

786 F.2d 1029 (11th Cir. 1986)

It is improper vouching for the prosecution, after an assistant U.S. attorney has testified, to make reference to the credibility of the office of the U.S. attorney.

680 F.2d 652 (9th Cir. 1982)

It is improper vouching for the prosecution to make reference to a provision in the plea agreement of a government witness requiring that witness to submit to a polygraphic examination.

720 F.2d 1059 (9th Cir. 1983)

There is a conflict among the circuits as to whether it is improper vouching for government counsel to elicit on direct examination that a government witness agreed to testify truthfully at trial or that the witness knew that he or she was subject to a perjury charge if he or she testified falsely. The Sixth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits have found that this is not improper vouching.

630 F.2d 1184 (7th Cir. 1980)

871 F.2d 1298 (6th Cir. 1989)

719 F.2d 375 (11th Cir. 1983)

The Second and Ninth Circuits have found that this is improper vouching. The unspoken message is that the prosecutor knows what the truth is and is assuring the jury that the truth will be told.

618 F.2d 530 (9th Cir. 1980)

631 F.2d 1049 (2d Cir. 1980)

It is proper to introduce a plea agreement on redirect examination if the credibility of a witness has been attacked on cross-examination. However, when a plea agreement has been introduced on redirect, the prosecution should not be permitted to argue during examination of the witness or during summation in a manner that causes the cooperation agreement to be a vouching for the witness.

604 F.2d 121 (2d Cir. 1979)

871 F.2d 105 (9th Cir. 1989)

859 F.2d 461 (7th Cir. 1988)

When the prosecutor improperly vouches for the veracity of a witness, the trial judge should strike the remark and immediately instruct jurors that they may consider no evidence other than that presented to them, that the prosecutor is an advocate, not a sworn witness, and that they must treat the prosecutor's assertion as an argument that they are free to reject.

663 F.2d 1173 (2d Cir. 1981)

Part VII. Multiple Defendants

A. Severance of Defendants

Rule 14 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides as follows:

If it appears that a defendant or the government is prejudiced by a joinder of offenses or of defendants in an indictment or information or by such joinder for trial together, the court may order an election or separate trials of counts, grant a severance of defendants or provide whatever other relief justice requires. In ruling on a motion by defendant for severance the court may order the attorney for the government to deliver to the court for inspection in camera any statements or confessions made by the defendants which the government intends to introduce in evidence at trial.

A Rule 14 claim assumes that the initial joinder of the defendants was proper but challenges their joint trial as unduly prejudicial. In contrast, a Rule 8(b) claim questions the propriety of joining two or more defendants in a single indictment in the first instance.

868 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1989)

1. Individuals indicted together are ordinarily to be tried together

The general rule, especially in conspiracy cases, is that persons jointly indicted should be tried together.

537 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1976)

864 F.2d 71 (8th Cir. 1988)

569 F.2d 928 (5th Cir. 1978)

868 F.2d 1562 (11th Cir. 1989)

The trial court has wide discretion in ruling on a motion to sever trials of defendants who have been properly joined.

870 F.2d 496 (9th Cir. 1989)

870 F.2d 729 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

Rule 8(b), not Rule 8(a), governs joinder of multiple-defendant, multiple-offense cases.

853 F.2d 1037 (2d Cir. 1988)
858 F.2d 994 (5th Cir. 1988)

863 F.2d 572 (8th Cir. 1988)
867 F.2d 47 (1st Cir. 1989)

2. When joinder not permitted

Joinder is not permitted in conspiracy cases in which the substantive offenses alleged in the indictment fall outside the scope of the conspiracy with which the defendant is charged.

829 F.2d 1038 (11th Cir. 1987)

3. Better chance of acquittal does not warrant severance

To secure severance a defendant must demonstrate that he or she will suffer substantial prejudice at a joint trial, not just that he or she stands a better chance of acquittal at a separate trial.

538 F.2d 737 (7th Cir. 1976)
543 F.2d 431 (2d Cir. 1976)

4. Motion for severance by defendant claiming need for testimony of codefendant

When a defendant seeks severance in order to secure the testimony of a codefendant, the defendant must demonstrate (1) a bona fide need for the testimony, (2) the substance of the testimony, (3) its exculpatory nature and effect, and (4) that the codefendant will in fact testify if the cases are severed. If the movant makes such a showing, the court must examine the significance of the testimony to the movant's theory of defense, assess the extent of prejudice caused by the absence of the testimony, pay close attention to considerations of judicial economy, and give weight to the timeliness of the motion.

622 F.2d 911 (5th Cir. 1980)
729 F.2d 1302 (11th Cir. 1984)

870 F.2d 729 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

One of the relevant considerations is the sufficiency of the showing that the codefendant would in fact testify at a severed trial and would waive his or her Fifth Amendment privilege.

593 F.2d 182 (2d Cir. 1979)

It is not an abuse of judicial discretion to deny a defendant's motion for severance that is based on a codefendant's offer to testify for the defendant provided that the codefendant is tried first.

567 F.2d 916 (9th Cir. 1978)

870 F.2d 729 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

585 F.2d 703 (4th Cir. 1978)

Severance is not appropriate if the offer of the codefendant to provide exculpatory testimony is conditioned on the defendant's being tried last. The codefendant would be likely to waive the privilege against self-incrimination only if he or she had already been acquitted.

750 F.2d 1169 (2d Cir. 1984)

When a defendant seeks severance on the basis of a need for the testimony of a codefendant, the defendant must show that the codefendant would be called at a separate trial, that the codefendant would in fact testify, and that the testimony would be favorable to the defendant.

736 F.2d 571 (10th Cir. 1984)

737 F.2d 971 (11th Cir. 1984)

Given such a showing, the court should examine the significance of the codefendant's testimony in relation to the defense theory; consider whether the codefendant's testimony would be subject to substantial, damaging impeachment; assess the counterargument of judicial economy; and give weight to the timeliness of the motion.

748 F.2d 8 (1st Cir. 1984)

Conclusory statements by counsel moving for severance are insufficient to establish that a codefendant's testimony at a separate trial would exculpate counsel's client. The defendant moving for severance must proffer facts sufficiently detailed to allow the court to conclude that the testimony of the codefendant would in fact be substantially exculpatory of the defendant at trial.

703 F.2d 768 (4th Cir. 1983)

870 F.2d 729 (D.C. Cir. 1989)

5. Motion for severance based on antagonistic defenses

For severance based on antagonistic defenses to be warranted, the defenses must be antagonistic to the point of being irreconcilable and mutually exclusive. They must be so antagonistic that the jury, in order to believe the defense of one defendant, must necessarily disbelieve the defense of the other defendant.

546 F.2d 910 (D.C. Cir. 1976)
668 F.2d 625 (1st Cir. 1982)
858 F.2d 994 (5th Cir. 1988)

863 F.2d 1564 (11th Cir. 1989)
865 F.2d 1069 (9th Cir. 1989)
870 F.2d 1304 (7th Cir. 1989)

Severance is not required simply because one defendant may wish to comment on another defendant's refusal to testify.

546 F.2d 910 (D.C. Cir. 1976)

The defendant must show that a joint trial would be so prejudicial that the court must exercise its discretion in only one way, that is, to grant the defendant's motion for severance.

827 F.2d 424 (9th Cir. 1987)

6. Defendant's desire to testify on one count but not on another

If the defendant moves to sever the trial of one count of the indictment from the trial of another, severance is warranted only if the defendant has made a convincing showing that he or she has both important testimony to give concerning one count and a strong need to refrain from testifying on the other.

552 F.2d 216 (8th Cir. 1977)
861 F.2d 1225 (10th Cir. 1988)

872 F.2d 107 (5th Cir. 1989)

The court must then weigh considerations of economy and expedition in judicial administration against the defendant's interest in having a free choice with respect to testifying.

706 F.2d 282 (10th Cir. 1983)

7. Factors to be considered by court in assessing motion for severance

When assessing the merits of a severance motion, the trial court must balance the possibility of prejudice to the defendant against the public interest in judicial efficiency and economy. Severance should be granted only if the defendant can demonstrate that a joint trial will result in specific and compelling prejudice to the conduct of his or her defense.

720 F.2d 1527 (11th Cir. 1983)

865 F.2d 1069 (9th Cir. 1989)

8. Defendant's motion for severance waived if not renewed at close of evidence

A defendant's motion for severance is waived if not renewed at the close of the evidence, since it is at that point that any prejudice resulting from a joint trial is ascertainable.

866 F.2d 988 (8th Cir. 1989)

870 F.2d 1354 (7th Cir. 1989)

B. Bruton Rule

In Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123 (1968), the Supreme Court held that the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment was violated when the confession of one defendant, implicating another defendant, was placed before the jury at the defendants' joint trial and the confessing defendant did not take the witness stand and was therefore not subject to cross-examination. This was a violation even though the court gave the jury a cautionary instruction that the confession was to be considered only as evidence against the confessing defendant.

In Richardson v. Marsh, 481 U.S. 200 (1987), the Court held that the Bruton rule is limited to confessions of a nontestifying codefendant that are facially incriminating of another defendant. Thus, the Confrontation Clause is not violated by the admission of a nontestifying codefendant's confession that is redacted to eliminate the defendant's name and any other reference to the defendant's existence. In Richardson, evidence introduced after the codefendant's redacted statement caused the statement to inculcate the defendant. However, the Court found that such "contextual" incrimination did not violate Bruton because the jury was likely to obey a cautionary instruction to consider the statement itself as evidence only against the confessing defendant.

In multidefendant cases, the court should explore the possibility of a Bruton problem before the potential jurors are sworn in, since the government may be planning to offer in evidence a pretrial confession by one of the codefendants. The court must consider whether there is a possible Bruton problem and, if so, methods of avoiding that problem.

1. Determining whether Bruton rule is applicable

Bruton does not apply to the confession of one codefendant if that confession does not refer to the other defendant and the jury is instructed that the confession is received as evidence only against the confessing defendant.

481 U.S. 200 (1987)

Bruton does not apply to the confession of a codefendant if the codefendant testifies at trial, because he or she is then subject to cross-examination by the other defendant or defendants. Since the codefendant is available for cross-examination, the Confrontation Clause is not violated and severance is not constitutionally mandated.

402 U.S. 622 (1971)

570 F.2d 643 (6th Cir. 1978)

562 F.2d 1001 (5th Cir. 1977)

However, if a testifying codefendant refuses to allow cross-examination by another defendant, Bruton applies.

828 F.2d 571 (9th Cir. 1987)

In Cruz v. New York, 481 U.S. 186 (1987), the Supreme Court abolished the "interlocking confessions" exception to the Bruton rule that had been espoused by four Justices in Parker v. Randolph, 442 U.S. 62 (1979). In Parker, a plurality of the Court had concluded that if two defendants have made full confessions, Bruton does not apply and the "interlocking confessions" are admissible against their respective makers in a joint trial. Cruz held that when a nontestifying codefendant's confession incriminating the defendant is not directly admissible against the defendant, the Confrontation Clause bars its admission at the defendants' joint trial, even if the jury is instructed not to consider it against the defendant, and even if the defendant's own confession is admitted against him or her.

If the nontestifying codefendant's confession is introduced in rebuttal to impeach a testifying defendant's explanation of his or her own confession, and the jury is properly instructed that the nontestifying codefendant's dant's confession is not to be considered for its truth, the Confrontation Clause is not violated and Bruton does not apply.

471 U.S. 2078 (1985)

Some circuits have held that the Bruton rule does not apply to an out-of-court statement that is admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2)(E) as a coconspirator statement.

554 F.2d 665 (5th Cir. 1977)

593 F.2d 88 (8th Cir. 1979)

578 F.2d 1058 (5th Cir. 1978)

Bruton does not apply to an out-of-court statement that is admissible as an excited utterance under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(2).

522 F.2d 448 (1st Cir. 1975)

857 F.2d 857 (1st Cir. 1988)

At least one circuit has held that Bruton does not apply to an out-of-court statement against penal interest under Federal Rule of Evidence 804(3).

526 F.2d 615 (8th Cir. 1975)

2. Avoidance of Bruton problem

When the court learns before trial that the government proposes to introduce an out-of-court confession of one defendant, the court should make inquiry as to the confession intended to be used and then decide what, if any, remedial steps are required. The court may

1. exclude the confession at a joint trial;
2. delete references in the confession to the codefendant against whom the confession is inadmissible;
3. order severance; or
4. try the defendants together but before different juries.

If the confession of a nontestifying codefendant is to be admitted at a joint trial, it must be redacted to eliminate any reference to the non-confessing defendant. In editing the confession, the court must eliminate both the non-confessing defendant's name and any references to his or her existence.

481 U.S. 200 (1987)

862 F.2d 526 (5th Cir. 1988)

The court may avoid Bruton problems by conducting the trial before two juries, with the confessing statement made by one defendant being heard only by the jury that is trying that defendant.

676 F.2d 1359 (11th Cir. 1982)
716 F.2d 16 (D.C. Cir. 1983)

758 F.2d 1151 (7th Cir. 1985)

C. Calling of Codefendant as Witness

In a joint trial a defendant may not call to the witness stand a codefendant who has not pled guilty and who has indicated an intention to assert the privilege against self-incrimination.

503 F.2d 598 (9th Cir. 1974)

When a codefendant who has pled guilty appears as a government witness in a defendant's trial, the codefendant must testify honestly and completely about his or her own participation in the crime for which the defendant is being tried. The codefendant may be examined by defense counsel concerning all aspects of his or her own involvement in the crime, as well as the disposition of any charges entered against him or her.

542 F.2d 61 (8th Cir. 1976)

D. Disclosure to Jury of Codefendant's Guilty Plea

Courts and prosecutors are generally prohibited from mentioning to the jury that a codefendant has pled guilty or been convicted.

778 F.2d 711 (11th Cir. 1985)

1. May be reversible error to disclose guilty plea of codefendant to jury

It is plain error for a prosecutor to make reference in an opening statement to the guilty plea of a codefendant.

544 F.2d 778 (5th Cir. 1977)
591 F.2d 1125 (5th Cir. 1979)

If jurors learn in some way of a codefendant's guilty plea, the trial judge should immediately admonish them against transferring the guilt of that defendant to any other defendant. It is incumbent upon the trial judge to take appropriate action to protect the substantive rights of the remaining defendants.

630 F.2d 294 (5th Cir. 1980)

If a codefendant pleads guilty during trial, the jury should not be advised that the codefendant is no longer in court because he or she has pled guilty or that the action against the codefendant has been "disposed of."

602 F.2d 1044 (2d Cir. 1979)

If a codefendant pleads guilty during trial, the court should give the jury an instruction to the following effect:

You will observe that defendant _____ is no longer in court. The fact that he [or she] is no longer here is because of a ruling made by the court. The reasons for that ruling are not your concern. His [or her] absence should not be considered by you as affecting in any way your determination of the guilt or innocence of any other defendant.

778 F.2d 711 (11th Cir. 1985)

2. Occasions when disclosure of codefendant's guilty plea is proper

Evidence of a codefendant's guilty plea may be brought out by defense counsel to impeach the testimony of the codefendant or to show the codefendant's acknowledgment of his or her participation in the offense.

542 F.2d 61 (8th Cir. 1976)

If a codefendant who has pled guilty takes the witness stand, evidence of his or her guilty plea may be introduced by the prosecution or the defense in order to aid the jury in assessing the codefendant's credibility.

703 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1983)

863 F.2d 474 (7th Cir. 1988)

778 F.2d 707 (11th Cir. 1985)

869 F.2d 1288 (9th Cir. 1989)

855 F.2d 12 (1st Cir. 1988)

If the guilty plea of a codefendant is properly introduced into evidence, the court should instruct the jury that that guilty plea may not be considered as substantive evidence of another defendant's guilt. The code-defendant's plea may be considered only as evidence relevant to the codefendant's own credibility.

578 F.2d 211 (8th Cir. 1978)

821 F.2d 234 (5th Cir. 1987)

703 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1983)

855 F.2d 12 (1st Cir. 1988)

814 F.2d 852 (2d Cir. 1987)

If a codefendant's plea agreement is introduced, it should be redacted to delete information harmful to the defendant and without probative value as to the codefendant's veracity. Such information includes statements indicating that the prosecutor has additional information verifying the testimony of the codefendant or that the prosecutor personally believes the witness's testimony.

823 F.2d 1457 (11th Cir. 1987)

863 F.2d 474 (7th Cir. 1988)

Part VIII. Verdict

A. Special Interrogatories in Criminal Cases

It is generally considered improper to propound special interrogatories to a jury in a criminal prosecution. A jury has the right to render a general verdict without being compelled to return a number of subsidiary findings to support that verdict.

505 F.2d 78 (5th Cir. 1974)
629 F.2d 439 (6th Cir. 1980)

700 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1983)

Although special verdicts are looked upon with disfavor in criminal cases, there is no per se rule against them.

670 F.2d 414 (3d Cir. 1982)
883 F.2d 662 (9th Cir. 1989)

A general verdict of guilty returned by a jury that has been instructed on applicable lesser included offenses is fatally ambiguous. This ambiguity cannot be cured by the use of special interrogatories.

870 F.2d 953 (3d Cir. 1989)

Special interrogatories are properly used in conspiracy cases to establish facts that must be used in sentencing. The necessary facts may be obtained by submitting interrogatories to the jury after it has returned a guilty verdict.

791 F.2d 1310 (7th Cir. 1986)
870 F.2d 1310 (7th Cir. 1989)

If a conspiracy count charges defendants with conspiring to distribute two or more different drugs for which Congress has prescribed different ranges of sentences, the trial court should, by the use of a special interrogatory or otherwise, require the jury to return a verdict that will indicate clearly on its face which of the charged drugs defendants were found to have conspired to distribute.

786 F.2d 1029 (11th Cir. 1986)

Interrogatories may be used if the information sought is relevant to the sentence.

826 F.2d 200 (2d Cir. 1987)

If the indictment alleges several distinct acts, any one of which might provide a basis for a guilty verdict, the trial court must specifically instruct the jury that it must agree unanimously upon the specific illegal act and the specific legal theories supporting its verdict.

833 F.2d 455 (3d Cir. 1987)

B. Directing Verdict by Court

The Sixth Amendment guarantees a defendant the opportunity to have a jury determine the defendant's guilt or innocence. The court may not direct a verdict of guilty in a jury trial no matter how conclusive the evidence is against the defendant.

430 U.S. 564 (1977)

544 F.2d 213 (5th Cir. 1976)

518 F.2d 685 (6th Cir. 1975)

840 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1988)

The court may not strike testimony and direct the jury to disregard it on the ground that it is unbelievable.

615 F.2d 329 (5th Cir. 1980)

The court may not instruct the jury that a fact has been established, no matter how clear the evidence.

840 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. 1988)

A dismissal or directed verdict may be ordered at the conclusion of the prosecutor's opening statement only when the prosecution has made a clear and deliberate concession that necessarily prevents a conviction, and then only after the prosecution has been given the opportunity to fully correct errors or omissions.

825 F.2d 746 (3d Cir. 1987)

C. Motion for Judgment of Acquittal

1. Criteria to be applied by court in ruling on motion for judgment of acquittal

A motion for acquittal must be granted when the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the government, is such that a reasonable juror must have a reasonable doubt as to the existence of any essential element of the crime charged.

547 F.2d 1250 (5th Cir. 1977)

783 F.2d 1087 (D.C. Cir. 1986)

An accused is entitled to a judgment of acquittal only when there is no evidence on which reasonable minds might fairly base a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

589 F.2d 707 (D.C. Cir. 1978)

Upon a motion for judgment of acquittal, the trial court is not to weigh evidence or assess credibility of witnesses, but is to submit the case to the jury if evidence and inferences therefrom most favorable to the prosecution would warrant a jury finding that the defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

590 F.2d 1379 (5th Cir. 1979)

2. Reservation of ruling on motion for judgment of acquittal

The court may not reserve its ruling on a motion to acquit made by the defendant at the close of the government's case.

551 F.2d 756 (8th Cir. 1977)

701 F.2d 1086 (4th Cir. 1983)

632 F.2d 641 (5th Cir. 1980)

733 F.2d 210 (2d Cir. 1984)

It may reserve its ruling on a motion for judgment of acquittal made at the close of all evidence.

551 F.2d 756 (8th Cir. 1977)

D. Mistrial

Although a court has the power to declare a mistrial, that power must be exercised with extreme caution in a criminal prosecution. If a mistrial is improvidently declared, the bar of double jeopardy may prevent the retrial of the defendant.

1. Court has power to declare mistrial

It is within the discretion of the trial court to declare a mistrial even over the defendant's objection if the court determines that facts and circumstances within or without the courtroom preclude the possibility of a fair trial either for the defendant or for the government.

557 F.2d 697 (10th Cir. 1977)

A mistrial is not to be declared unless (1) there is "manifest necessity" for termination of the proceedings, or (2) "the ends of public justice" would otherwise be defeated.

566 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1978)

855 F.2d 1492 (11th Cir. 1988)

2. Mistrial to be avoided if possible

The power of the courts to declare a mistrial must be exercised with the greatest caution, under urgent circumstances, and for very plain and obvious causes.

434 U.S. 497 (1978)

582 F.2d 186 (2d Cir. 1978)

516 F.2d 1034 (3d Cir. 1975)

Declaration of a mistrial is to be avoided if possible.

509 F.2d 312 (D.C. Cir. 1974)

The trial judge should not foreclose the defendant's right to take his or her case to the original jury until a scrupulous exercise of judicial discretion leads to the conclusion that the ends of public justice would not be served by a continuation of the proceedings.

400 U.S. 470 (1971)

Before granting a mistrial the court should always consider whether the giving of a curative instruction or some less drastic alternative is appropriate.

740 F.2d 299 (4th Cir. 1984)

868 F.2d 210 (7th Cir. 1989)

756 F.2d 323 (4th Cir. 1985)

3. Alternative courses of action must be considered

Before declaring a mistrial, a trial judge must consider all the procedural alternatives to a mistrial, and, after finding none of them to be adequate, make a finding of manifest necessity for the declaration of a mistrial.

434 U.S. 497 (1978)

The trial judge should, before declaring a mistrial, completely canvass alternatives to declaring a mistrial. To avoid the bar of double jeopardy, the government generally must demonstrate that, under the circumstances, the trial judge had no alternative but to declare a mistrial.

589 F.2d 117 (2d Cir. 1979)

591 F.2d 218 (3d Cir. 1979)

The judge should seek to determine whether the defendant wishes to proceed or to have a mistrial declared.

553 F.2d 1064 (7th Cir. 1977)

845 F.2d 739 (7th Cir. 1988)

The judge should solicit suggested alternatives from counsel.

598 F.2d 132 (D.C. Cir. 1978)

The judge may declare a mistrial even over the objection of the defendant.

557 F.2d 697 (10th Cir. 1977)

4. Declaring mistrial because of deadlocked jury

If the jury reports that it is deadlocked, the trial judge must determine whether there is a probability that the jury can reach a verdict within a reasonable time. The judge should question the jury, either individually or through its foreperson, on the possibility that its deadlock could be overcome by further deliberations.

505 F.2d 845 (9th Cir. 1974)

854 F.2d 955 (7th Cir. 1988)

Merely questioning the jury foreperson may not be sufficient, but questioning the foreperson individually and the jury either individually or as a group is satisfactory.

566 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1978)

The Sixth Circuit has suggested that the trial judge should ask not only of the foreperson but also the individual jurors whether they feel that there is any prospect of the jury reaching a verdict.

536 F.2d 1149 (6th Cir. 1976)

Before declaring a mistrial, the judge should inquire whether the jury has reached a partial verdict as to any defendant as to any count.

596 F.2d 76 (2d Cir. 1979)

Whether the court has properly exercised its discretion to declare a mistrial because of a deadlocked jury depends on the following factors: (1) a timely objection by the defendant, (2) the jurors' collective opinion that they cannot agree, (3) the length of the deliberations, (4) the length of the trial, (5) the complexity of the issues presented to the jury, (6) any prior communications that the judge has had with the jury, (7) the effects of possible exhaustion, and (8) the impact that the coercion of further deliberations might have on the jury.

566 F.2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1978)

854 F.2d 955 (7th Cir. 1988)

732 F.2d 53 (6th Cir. 1984)

5. Improvident declaration of mistrial

Improvident declaration of a mistrial may bar retrial or may compel the release on double jeopardy grounds of a defendant convicted at a second trial.

579 F.2d 141 (2d Cir. 1978)

653 F.2d 1010 (5th Cir. 1981)

593 F.2d 415 (1st Cir. 1979)

664 F.2d 1050 (6th Cir. 1981)

607 F.2d 1081 (4th Cir. 1979)

The Double Jeopardy Clause does not ordinarily bar the retrial of defendants who themselves ask the court to declare a mistrial.

456 U.S. 667 (1982)

870 F.2d 267 (5th Cir. 1989)

866 F.2d 512 (1st Cir. 1989)

A motion for a mistrial made by the defendant normally serves to remove any barrier to reprosecution, but such is not the case when the prosecutor has, through bad faith or overreaching, "goaded" the defendant into requesting a mistrial.

456 U.S. 667 (1982)

640 F.2d 225 (9th Cir. 1981)

618 F.2d 88 (9th Cir. 1980)

854 F.2d 955 (7th Cir. 1988)

If the defendant's motion for a mistrial is denied, and a mistrial is later declared on different grounds, the defendant is not deemed to have consented to the mistrial.

845 F.2d 739 (7th Cir. 1988)

854 F.2d 955 (7th Cir. 1988)

The Federal Judicial Center

The Federal Judicial Center is the research, development, and training arm of the federal judicial system. It was established by Congress in 1967 (28 U.S.C. §§ 620-629), on the recommendation of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

By statute, the Chief Justice of the United States is chairman of the Center's Board, which also includes the director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts and six judges elected by the Judicial Conference.

The Center's Continuing Education & Training Division provides educational programs and services for all third branch personnel. These include orientation seminars, regional workshops, on-site training for support personnel, and tuition support.

The Innovations & Systems Development Division designs and tests new technologies, especially computer systems, that are useful for case management and court administration. The division also contributes to the training required for the successful implementation of technology in the courts.

The Publications Division edits and coordinates the production of all Center publications, including research reports and studies, educational and training publications, reference manuals, and periodicals. The Center's Information Services Office, which maintains a specialized collection of materials on judicial administration, is located within this division.

The Research Division undertakes empirical and exploratory research on federal judicial processes, court management, and sentencing and its consequences, usually at the request of the Judicial Conference and its committees, the courts themselves, or other groups in the federal court system.

The Special Educational Services Division is responsible for the production of educational audio and video media, educational publications, and special seminars and workshops. The Federal Judicial History Office, created in response to Congress's mandate that the Center conduct programs relating to judicial branch history, is located within this division.

FEDERAL JUDICIAL CENTER • 1520 H STREET, N.W. • WASHINGTON, D.C. 20005